Debate Still Possible

By Robert C. Albright

In the face of 12 to 11 refusal by a Senate committee to consider neutrality legislation this session, President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Hull yesterday again urged adoption of their six-point neutrality program.

Secretary Hull declared and the President reiterated that "the interests of peace and the security of the United States" require a stand for all of the principles embodied in the Administration's neutrality recommendations.

For Congress to come back in an international crisis and attempt to pass a neutrality measure would leave it open to the accusation of unneutrality, President Roosevelt told reporters.

Silent on Special Session

The President declined to say anything about prospects of a special session, or what will be the next Administration neutrality move in the present session. Senate Majority Leader Barkley and Chairman Key Pittman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee were equally noncommittal following an afternoon conference with Secretary Hull.

Both Barkley and Pittman pointed out that a motion to discharge the Foreign Relations Committee and force the issue to the Senate floor could be offered by any individual Senator, or any Senator might offer a neutrality measure as an amendment to any pending House-approved bill.

King May Take Lead

Both admitted the discharge procedure is "being considered" but said no decisions have been reached.

Pittman modified an earlier statement that his committee action apparently disposed of the question, by adding:

"I mean it seems to be over so far as the committee is concerned."

That at least an independent move may be made to carry the issue to the Senate floor was suggested by Senator King (Democrat), of Utah. King said he would introduce a resolution to discharge the committee from further consideration of See NEUTRAL, Page 7, Column 2.

Sabotage Hinted In $500,000 Fire At Gas Mask Plant

Special Dispatch to The Post

Boston, July 11.—The United States Army Intelligence tonight was investigating the $500,000 fire which destroyed the Weymouth Art Leather plant in East Weymouth today, leveling 12 buildings and causing about 40 chemical explosions which injured several workmen and firemen.

The Army's concern was explained by the military importance of the plant as a manufacturer of gas masks and synthetic leather which would be highly valuable in war time, and also by the plant's location, only about a mile from the huge Hingham naval ammunition depot.

In recent weeks the plant had been operating in three shifts manufacturing gas mask materials which were exported to the British Air Raid Precaution, the new home defense unit set up in England.

Although fire officials said the blaze might have been caused by static electricity, the Army investigation indicated that the possibility of sabotage was being considered.

All Foreigners Told to Quit Tyrol Province

1,000 Involved as Italy Clears Bolzano For 'Military Policy'

By the Associated Press

Rome, July 11.—All foreigners have been ordered to leave Bolzano province in the Tyrol, diplomatic circles were informed tonight.

At least 1,000 were involved in addition to 8,000 Germans who are to be repatriated and 150,000 German Italians who may choose between remaining in Italy or going to the Reich.

Diplomats said they learned British, French, Swiss and Dutch citizens had been ordered to leave immediately.

They asserted that today it became clear the expulsions would apply to all foreigners.

The Italian government was said to have decided on eviction for "military policy"—presumably to prevent espionage.

Paul Ruegger, Swiss minister to Italy, was due back in Rome tomorrow and it was reported that many of the Swiss who had received expulsion orders had been told to wait until he can get an explanation from the Italian foreign office.

It was said the Swiss minister would remind Italian authorities that 135,000 Italians live in Switzerland, many more than the number of Swiss citizens in Italy.

Yugoslavian Union With Bulgaria Is Revived at Sofia

By the Associated Press

Sofia, July 11.—Yugoslavia and Bulgaria tonight revived an old project for virtual union of the Slavic peoples of the Balkans by forming a customs union and adopting a common foreign policy.

Premier Kiosselevanoff, who joined Prince Paul, of Yugoslavia, in announcing a "neutral front" last night, was reported to have placed such a pan-Slav program before the Bulgarian cabinet on his return to Sofia.

The program was said to call also for collaboration in developing foreign trade and for cession to Bulgaria of 900 square miles taken by Yugoslavia after the World War.

It was believed both Germany and Italy regarded favorably the new rapprochement.

Schram to Succeed Jones In Chairmanship of RFC

President Roosevelt has definitely selected Emil Schram, a member of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation board of directors, as chairman of the corporation, succeeding Jesse H. Jones, who has been appointed Federal loan administrator. It was learned yesterday.

It is expected the RFC board will elect Schram chairman this week. Jones, according to Administration plans, will resign the RFC chairmanship and take the oath as loan administrator.

The President's comments yesterday on the duties of Paul V. McNutt, appointed Federal security administrator, caused speculation as to Jones' duties as head of the lending agencies. Administration of the President Backs New WPA Hours

22 New Dealers Move for Return to Prevailing Rates; U. S. Hunts Killers

President Roosevelt yesterday expressed belief that the Administration would stick to the new WPA requirement that workers put in 130 hours of labor a month, despite widespread strikes of skilled workers protesting the provision.

At his press conference, the Chief Executive in effect disapproved a bill sponsored by 22 Senators—mostly New Dealers—that would restore the prevailing wage clause for which the new requirement was substituted in Congress. Under the new regulation workers earn the same monthly wage but in some cases are required to work many more hours for it.

The President's view was expressed as a Federal investigation was begun into fatal WPA strike disorders in Minneapolis.

Meanwhile, throughout the country the skilled workers' strike on WPA projects continued, despite warning that those absent five days would be discharged. There were indications of more widespread walkouts shortly.

Walkout Spreading

Associated Press dispatches gave this general picture:

In New York the A. F. L. claimed 70,000 men out, but Administrator Brehon Somervell put the number at nearer 7,000.

At Detroit 28,100 of 48,000 workers joined a one-day strike and 8,000 demonstrated at City Hall against the new hours requirement.

New Jersey State Building and Construction Trades Council (A. F. L.) called on all skilled workers to quit WPA work tonight.

Wisconsin had 25,000 to 30,000 out with some returning to work but others quitting.

Nation-Wide Protest July 20

Illinois saw 23,117 of 117,345 on the rolls idle.

In Ohio one-third of 12,400 strikers returned.

Minnesota's WPA idle numbered from 15,000 to 20,000.

The A. F. L. in Pennsylvania called a walkout of 25,000 workers for Friday and Philadelphia's C. I. O. called, with 70,000 members, and 20,000 Workers Alliance members were pledged to support the strike.

California, Montana, Indiana and North Dakota had some strikers but others had resumed work.

The Workers Alliance announced a "Nation-wide protest" and work stoppage July 20, while the Workers Security Federation reversed its previous stand and endorsed the strikes.

Only 3 Per Cent on Strike

The President said he was informed that about 3 per cent of the total WPA enrollment is on strike and that the walkouts were concentrated largely in two or three communities. In an announcement from the WPA, Works Projects Commissioner Harrington said 77,827 persons were not at work Monday, out of a total WPA employment of 2,400,000.

The commissioner said he had called attention of the Justice Department to the Minneapolis strike, which resulted in the death of a policeman Monday, and Attorney General Murphy stated that a Federal investigation would be made.

Harrington cited a section of the relief act forbidding anyone to deprive another of WPA benefits through "force, threat, intimidation or boycott."

The commissioner warned that WPA strikers who attempt to circumvent the rule of dismissal after five days' absence "will not get away with it." It had been reported that some relief workers who objected to the new regulations were conducting "slow-down" strikes.

State Police Put on Guard In Auto Strike

Michigan Moves 120 Men Into Pontiac After Two Clashes Of Pickets, Workers

By the Associated Press

Detroit, July 11.—Michigan State police officials prepared tonight to move 120 men into Pontiac before dawn to prevent a repetition of the disorders which marked the General Motors strike there today and yesterday.

Capt. Laurence A. Lyon, of the State police, indicated arrests would be made under the State riot act if necessary.

Local Authorities Split

The scene of trouble is the Pontiac Fisher Body plant at whose gates two violent clashes have occurred this week. Participants were pickets of the United Auto Workers (C. I. O.), which called the strike and workers not participating in the strike.

Gov. Luren D. Dickinson ordered the State police to prepare for strike duty today and expressed displeasure over the handling of the situation by the Pontiac police. Reports from Pontiac indicated the city officials and the Oakland County sheriff were not in agreement on how to cope with the disorders.

The Pontiac Fisher plant is one of 11 General Motors plants in which U. A. W.-C. I. O. has called a strike of skilled workers. The latest to be affected is the Cadillac plant here, in which a strike was called today. The corporation estimated 6,750 men were idle.

Pickets Hurt Stones

Today's clash at the Pontiac Fisher plant occurred at 7 a. m. when non-striking production workers attempted to enter the plant in a fleet of automobiles. The pickets hurled stones, threatened to overturn cars, and in some instances stopped cars by breaking the ignition connection.

Several persons were injured, none seriously. Six were arrested. Approximately 1,000 pickets took part in this morning's outbreak.

Situation Out of Control

Sheriff Spencer C. Howarth, of Oakland, Pontiac County, charged after today's fight "the situation is out of control and has been out of control since the beginning."

Both City Manager William P. Edmondson and the Pontiac chief of police, Charles S. Rhodes, appealed to the State police for aid early today, prior to the Governor's order.

The strike started a week ago. The U. A. W.-C. I. O. is demanding a supplementary agreement covering tool and die workers, maintenance workers and other skilled employees. The corporation has asked the National Labor Relations board to determine which of two U. A. W. unions represents its employees.

Measures to Pay For N. D. Pensions Losing Election

Fargo, N. Dak., July 11 (AP).—Early returns from today's special election indicated a strong vote against passage of the four measures sponsored by former Gov. William Langer in a move to pay for the $40 minimum old age pension plan he helped push through the recent Legislature.

On an act abolishing the office of grain storage commissioner—$76 of 2,280 precincts gave 11,146 for the act, 64,455 against.

On a proposed system of municipal liquor control, 576 precincts gave 11,030 yes, 65,980 no.

On a two-year moratorium on highway construction—572 precincts gave 10,271 yes, 65,913 no.

On a gross income or transactions tax 588 precincts gave 9,481 yes and 66,896 no.

The three latter measures were intended to help pay for the $40 minimum monthly pensions.

Lawyer Indicted On Check Charges

New York, July 11 (AP).—John Reynolds Robertson, 36, Washington lawyer who formerly served as a law clerk for Chief Justice Hughes, was indicted tonight on 15 counts of forgery in the second degree and petty larceny.

Robertson was arrested a week ago on charges of passing worthless checks, one for $21.28. The complaint cited seven checks aggregating $496.38.

Pending arraignment, he was held in default of $1,500 bail.

Jury Rules Heiress' Death Accidental

Husband, Stepfather Of Bride Testify At Coroner's Inquest

By the Associated Press

Reno, Nev., July 11.—After deliberating two minutes, a coroner's jury returned a verdict of accidental death today in the shooting of Mrs. Caroline Roebeling Hagner Walters, 27-year-old heiress.

The jury had listened to five hours of testimony by nine witnesses, including Paul Walters, Mrs. Walters' husband of a few weeks, and Col. Arthur O'Brien, of Seattle, her stepfather for the past 17 years.

The heiress to part of the Roebeling bridge-building fortune was found dying in her fashionable home here Saturday night, with two pistols lying at her side. The jury found she came to her death by a gunshot wound in her left shoulder, "accidentally inflicted."

Walters described coming home from work, meeting his wife and talking with her for some time in the den. He said he handed her a letter, which she read; she said, "This is very annoying," and smashed a cocktail glass on the floor.

Describes Scene

"I said, 'Oh, darling, don't do that,'" testified Walters.

Then she left the room, he said. "Pretty soon I heard something like a door slamming, then I heard her voice calling, 'Paul Paul!'"

It sounded like it came from the guest room. I went in there—she was lying across the bed. I picked up her head and asked what had happened. She pointed at her shoulder and then said, 'Oh, Paul, I love you so much.' I told the cook to find a nurse and get a doctor."

Marie Agnes Conway, nurse at the Walters home, said she had

Human Glands Kept Alive By Synthetic Diet

New York, July 11 (AP).—Dr. Alexis Carrel, Nobel prize winner, has succeeded in keeping human glands alive in the Carrel-Lindbergh pump by feeding them purely synthetic diets. It was learned today at the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research here.

In a report to be published by the institute, Dr. Carrel and his co-workers show that it is most essential to develop several kinds of artificial foods for the cultivation of the organs outside the body. Such synthetic diets will be much less expensive than human blood serum.

Even more valuable for science is the fact the exact composition of a synthetic medium is known.

By adding or taking away some known ingredient, the effect of any food substance upon the condition of the gland or any other organ under study can be determined.

Pair Imprisoned 100 Feet in Air

New York (Wednesday), July 12 (AP).—An unidentified boy and girl were getting an excellent but nervous view of the World's Fair early today from their seats in a chute of the parachute jump concession which stuck in midair 100 feet from the ground.

They were in no danger, and rescue, according to police and fair officials, was merely a matter of time until mechanical trouble on the motor operating that particular chute could be repaired.

New Post Halts McNutt Campaigning

Appointment Won't Keep Friends From Pressing Candidacy, Roosevelt Discloses

By Felix Cotten.

President Roosevelt revealed yesterday that appointment of Paul V. McNutt, Philippine High Commissioner, as Federal Security Administrator will prevent him from personally campaigning for the 1940 Democratic Presidential nomination.

This will not forestall his friends from pressing his campaign, however, the President disclosed. As a result, Frank McHale, McNutt's campaign manager, whose headquarters are in Indianapolis, will push forward as energetically as ever.

McNutt's nomination was forwarded to the Senate at noon yesterday, and was approved by the Senate Finance Committee without the formality of a meeting. Committee members were polled on the Senate floor and a favorable report filed late in the afternoon.

Coalescence Prevented

By this means, Democratic leaders acted quickly to prevent coalescence of any organized opposition. There had been talk of opposition from organized labor. Moreover, certain New Dealers in Congress and in official positions privately had expressed deep displeasure over political implications seen in the appointment.

The Finance Committee's action will enable leaders to call the nomination up in the Senate tomorrow. Indications were that McNutt would be confirmed without much trouble.

Mr. Roosevelt took occasion at his press conference to scold newspapermen for speculating on the political implications of the appointment. He said it was a pity for newspapermen—even those covering events in Washington—to be shallow in reporting news. Strange as it may appear, he declared, there are sometimes other considerations than politics involved in important appointments.

Named for Good Record

The President told newspapermen he did not think they would find McNutt running as a candidate for the Presidency any more than some 10 or 12 other people he could name among them certain Cabinet members.

He denied McNutt had been appointed with the specific understanding that his campaign should continue. That was not mentioned at all in their conversation, he declared.

McNutt was appointed, the President declared, because as dean of the Indiana University law school, Governor of Indiana and High Commissioner, he had made a good record as an administrator. He said he expected him to make good in the new assignment.

Businessmen Fall

He took occasion to comment on the tragedies that had occurred in bringing businessmen to Washington and putting them in important official positions. The percentage of failures with such men, he said, is greater than among those with some experience in public life.

What Roosevelt emphasized that what McNutt's friends do could not be helped. Asked whether this meant that friends of the other prospective candidates were at liberty to promote their candidacies, he said that was the exact opposite of what he had tried to imply. Some newspapermen drew from this remark the inference that Administration officials were obligated to refrain from actively seeking the Presidential nomination.

The fact that McNutt has been "bottled up," so far as any open campaign for the Presidency is concerned, revived speculation over a third term. There was a feeling among some observers that the Administration had kept the road clear for a third term if the President decides to seek the nomination.

Brown Offers Light-Duty Police For Opening of 10 Playgrounds

A plan to open at least 10 additional school playgrounds was advanced yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent. He proposed to Commissioner Hazen that policemen assigned to "light duty" because of disabilities be used as emergency play supervisors.

Maj. Brown suggested his men take over play centers in communities where the need is greatest. Several hundred youngsters now exposed to dangers of playing in streets and alleys could be accommodated under his plan, Maj. Brown told Hazen.

At the same time it was learned yesterday that an expanded allotment for District WPA recreational projects—which would provide 80 more play supervisors for municipal

City Reorganization Appears Doomed As Committeemen Favor a Delay

By James D. Secrest.

A payless payday for 11,000 District employees next Saturday was predicted by city officials yesterday unless the present deadlock over the District appropriations bill is broken by tomorrow.

The only hope of dislodging the supply bill in time for municipal officials to make up the $300,000 pay roll is House acceptance of the conference report on the revenue bill which carries an authorization for a $6,500,000 Federal contribution and an income tax on persons domiciled in the District.

Should the House accept the tax agreement today or tomorrow, an immediate conference on the supply bill will be called by Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, in an effort to end the impasse over the lump sum appropriations.

Senate Goes Half Way

The Senate yesterday adopted the compromise agreement on the tax bill, thereby indicating a willingness to meet the House halfway on the supply bill.

Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on District appropriations, predicting that the House will stand adamant for a $5,000,000 United States payment, said he will not consent to any increase unless the House changes its instructions.

Talk of adjournment of Congress within a week spurred the hopes of sponsors of the compromise plan, however, and Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, stated that Republican leaders are willing to accept the agreement in order to dispose of the District bills that otherwise might impede adjournment.

The tax conference report will be filed in the House today by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, and may be called up immediately under unanimous consent. If an objection is raised, however, the report must lie over until tomorrow.

Allen Hopeful

Some District officials expressed the opinion that even if Congress breaks the deadlock on the local supply bill before the end of the week it was unlikely that the pay would be distributed on Saturday.

Others questioned the legality of permitting municipal employees to work on Saturday if money is not available for salaries.

District Auditor Donovan said "Congress is still in session and where there's life there's hope." Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen said he was worried. Commissioner George E. Allen, who left the city yesterday to attend the conference of WPA administrators in Chicago, said, before leaving, "something will be done even if the bill is not passed." He would say no more.

Maj. Donovan said the pay roll on Saturday includes 10,486 annual employees, 3,421 per diem workers, 577 Federal employees paid out of District funds and 179 per diem workers in this category.

Some 3,600 public school teachers and librarians already have been paid for July and August.

5,000 Assured Aid

Meanwhile, more than 5,000 persons on the aged, blind and dependent children list were assured of money for July following the signatures of the General Accounting Office and Treasury Department, releasing the $183,000 the Social Security board advanced last week.

However, the more than 3,500 persons on the general relief rolls continued to exist on food from the Surplus Commodities Corporation. While the food list does not include milk, Commissioner Allen yesterday ordered that the children of per-

Roaring Meteor Lights Sky Over Detroit, Explodes

Detroit, July 11 (AP).—A huge meteor flashed over Detroit tonight and was consumed with a terrific explosion at approximately 1,000 feet altitude 13 miles north, near Mount Clemons.

The meteor, a giant ball of flame with a trailing tail, roared over the outlying metropolitan district with such force that thousands of residents believed it had struck the ground.

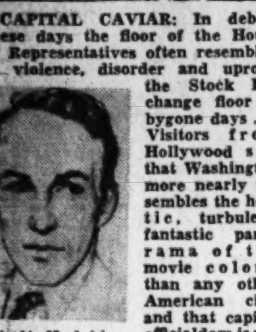

The sky lighted up at 8:50 p. m. for several seconds and the noise of the projectile was heard as it vanished in a great puff of smoke before it reached land.

Police headquarters was swamped with telephone calls inquiring about the meteor. The meteor was seen and heard over an area of at least a hundred-mile radius.

House Must Pass Tax Bill Report By Tomorrow To Avert Fiscal Crisis

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Archie MacLeish... candid stars, startles and character actors. Which Senator is most like Myrna Loy?

CAPITAL CAVIAR: In debate these days the floor of the House of Representatives often resembles, in violence, disorder and uproar, the Stock Exchange floor of bygone days. . . .

There's a rumor abroad in the land that at Secretary Ickes' office phonograph records are made of important telephone conversations. Someone called Mr. Ickes and referred to a phone talk the day before with another official.

"Oh, yes," said Honest Hal, so the story goes, "I heard that conversation today." So the rumor gained momentum.

Maybe Ickes said "I heard of that conversation today."

Into his office the other day rushed Thurman Arnold, nervously patting his pockets in search of his eyeglasses. He realized they were gone. To his secretary, the first Assistant Attorney General issued a crisp order:

"Phone the Pennsylvania Railroad, the Attorney General's office and the Mayflower cocktail room," he said.

"They're in one of those three places."

"record of a phone talk?"

To Ambassador Joe Kennedy is attributed a tale which illustrates how efficient is the espionage of a certain Asiatic power. . . . One day this power informed our State Dept. that an American ship was en route to China might never reach its destination unless a consignment of guns was removed from its cargo.

Quickly the ship's captain was reached by wireless.

"Have you any guns on board?" asked Washington.

"Not that I know about," replied the captain, "unless they're in one of the holds disguised as something else."

"Well," said Washington, "better look through the cargo and see if you can find 'em."

"But," replied the captain, "it will take almost two days to go clear through the cargo to find if we're carrying any guns."

This data was relayed to the embassy of the Asiatic power.

"Give us half an hour," said the embassy spokesman "and maybe we can help you locate the guns aboard the ship."

In 20 minutes the embassy was on the phone again.

"Look in hold No. 30-and-so," came the message. "We think you'll find the guns there."

The captain had the hold searched and found the guns.

"spies watch the cargoes?"

There are several fishy things about the story. Was there an export permit for the weapons? Could any foreign power talk that way to us? Maybe the Kennedy never heard of the tale. But it illustrates an impression rife in Washington that occasionally foreign spies can find out things about a ship's cargo that the captain himself doesn't know.

Almost every Irish Congressman has been credited, in the Capital's folklore, with saying peculiarly to the King of England "Your ancestors chased me mither out of Orinland," and so on, among them Congressman Patton of Texas. But it wasn't Patton.

It turns out that it occurred to Congressman Kilday of Texas, as the members were lined up to shake George's hand, that it would be a good joke to say this to the King. He mentioned the idea to other Congressmen; but before he faced the King he had decided it would be unseemly. The joke remained uncracked.

I don't suppose more than a handful of Senators bothered to read the article about the Senate credited to Archie MacLeish, the new Librarian of Congress, before they noted to confirm him, 64 to 8. Those who did found it a scholarly, thoroughly respectful appraisal of the power and importance of that body.

But the article in Fortune magazine also contained such phrases as "its residue of nonentities and mediocrities has outnumbered its famous names"; "preponderantly small fee lawyers"; "it is now and always has been a middle-class body in every sense of the term"; "has never risen above a not too giddy level of intelligence"; "the Seventy-fourth Senate is a Senate of decay"; and finally "only when the Senate gave its claws will it have declined from its great tradition."

Maybe the eight who voted against MacLeish were the ones who read the article.

Employer Gets Right to Ask NLRB Election

Board Will Put New, Liberalized Regulations Into Effect Friday

Liberalized rules under which an employer has the same right as a labor organization to petition for an election under the Wagner act were announced last night by the National Labor Relations Board.

The new regulations, effective Friday, will carry out NLRB Chairman J. Warren Madden's announced intention to permit employers caught in interjurisdictional disputes to ask for an election to determine the proper bargaining agency.

Board supporters believe they also will tend to have a silencing effect on labor board critics, who have been seeking to amend the act on grounds of NLRB bias and unfairness.

Inquiry Up Next Week

A resolution for an inquiry into the law's operation will come before the House next week. Representative Fries (Democrat), of Illinois, announced yesterday he will lead a group of 82 Congressmen in an attempt to stay "any emancipation" of the act.

In the meantime, Mary Dublin, of New York, general secretary of the National Consumers League, told the Senate Labor Committee the public opposed any changes in the act at this session.

She said a statement by the league opposing amendments at this time had been approved by about 1,500 members and leaders of consumer groups, with only three opposing replies.

Burke Expects Revision

Senator Burke (Democrat), of Nebraska, who has proposed sweeping labor act amendments, told Miss Dublin he thought opposition "will continue to grow until Congress exercises its clear obligation to clarify the law."

The new NLRB rules replace those under which the board has operated since April, 1938. While the framework of procedure will remain the same, other changes, in addition to the employer-petition agreement, will provide a minimum of ten days instead of five between filing of unfair labor practice charges and holding hearings on the charges and the ten-day period in which to file exception to reports of trial examiners will be increased to 20 days.

Employers' rights to amend answers to complaints will be liberalized and the filing of briefs or written statements at the conclusion of a hearing is made a matter of right and no longer subject to permission of the trial examiner. The former power of the regional director to appoint trial examiners is withdrawn, the designation to rest with the board or the chief trial examiner.

Three From Here To Attend Group Health Meeting

Three representatives of the Group Health Association will be delegates to the country's first national convention of group health organizations in New York next week, Cameron G. Garman, president of GHA, announced yesterday.

They are Perry R. Taylor, administrator of the Federal employees' medical care plan. For the past year he has been "on loan" to GHA by the Good Will Fund, which pays his salary.

It was also learned yesterday that Miss Edith Rockwood, Labor Department, has been elected vice president of the group, succeeding Roy F. Hendrickson, personnel director of the Agricultural Department. The latter, according to Garman, was compelled to relinquish the office by pressure of departmental business.

Miss Rockwood's place on the board of directors has been taken by Robert Shields, of the Agriculture Department's legal staff.

Sponsored by the Association of Medical Cooperatives, the New York convention July 20-22 will be attended by representatives of cooperative and privately operated clinics in Los Angeles, New York, Chicago, Minneapolis, Little Rock, Milwaukee, Denver, St. Louis and Elk City Okla., as well as Washington.

Jean Ryan Heads Baptist Union

Miss Jean Ryan yesterday was named president of the Young People's Union of Temple Baptist Church, Tenth and N streets northwest.

Others elected were: Clarke Swayze, vice president; Vernon Swiger, counselor; Alice Dickerson, recording secretary; Harry Newby, corresponding secretary; Marian Minnick, chorister; and Harold Bacon, pianist; Arthur Horner, devotional life commission director; Phyllis Gardner, service commission director; Ruth Horner, stewardship commission director; and Helene Fellowship commission director.

The Gallup Poll

Democratic Voters in Iowa Favor Wallace Over Hopkins by Small Vote

By Dr. George Gallup.

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, July 11.—When Harry L. Hopkins recently bought a farm in Iowa, his birthplace, and established a legal residence in that State, the question naturally arose as to which of Iowa's two sons in the Roosevelt Cabinet—Hopkins and Henry A. Wallace—is the more popular among Democratic voters in the Hawkeye State.

Both men have been prominently mentioned for the Democratic nomination in 1940.

During recent weeks the American Institute of Public Opinion has conducted a special canvass among Democratic voters in the urban, small town and rural sections of Iowa. It found that the two Iowa Secretaries—one in charge of commerce and business, the other in charge of agriculture—rank about evenly in popularity among Democrats in their State today, with Wallace slightly in the lead.

Wallace Favored

Although neither of the two men has thrown his hat in the ring, or taken any overt step regarding 1940, the Democratic voters of Iowa were asked in the survey which man they would favor if it came to a choice between Wallace and Hopkins for Democratic Presidential candidate next year.

The vote:

Favor Hopkins 46%

One voter in every four (25 per cent) said he had no opinion at this time.

Secretary Wallace, who has guided the New Deal farm program for more than six years, draws his popular following chiefly from farmers in the survey. Among the farm and rural population in Iowa, who constitute about 60 per cent of the total population, he is a 2-to-1 choice over Hopkins. Wallace's next greatest source of strength is the small towns where he leads over Hopkins, though by a small margin.

ADA to Request Zoning Changes In Anacostia

The Board of Zoning Adjustment will consider today an appeal from the Alley Dwelling Authority for several zoning changes necessary before the $1,000,000 alum clearance project in Anacostia gets under way.

Fourteen other applications for zone changes, making up the largest single list of appeals ever presented to the board, will be heard.

One of the appeals, which has been protested, is for permission to establish an educational institution at Twenty-ninth and Cleveland avenue northwest. The Maret School plans to move there from its present site on Kalorama road.

Compromise TVA Plan Agreed Upon

Conferees Report Bill To House Today; Roosevelt Approves

By the Associated Press.

Compromise legislation enabling the Tennessee Valley Authority to carry out contracts for public purchase of private utilities in three Southern States was approved by a joint committee of Senators and Representatives yesterday.

President Roosevelt gave virtual assurance that he would sign the legislation when it reaches his desk, possibly Friday.

The legislation, approved by Senators Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, Norris (Independent), of Nebraska, and McNary (Republican), of Oregon for the Senate group and Representatives May (Democrat), of Kentucky, Harter (Democrat), of Ohio, and Thompson (Democrat), of Texas, for the House, will be formally presented to the House tomorrow for action Thursday.

Representatives Andrews (Republican), of New York, and Short (Republican), of Missouri, withheld their signatures from the conference report approving a new $61,500,000 bond issue to finance TVA's share of the $78,600,000 Tennessee Electric Power Co. contract and subsequent purchases from the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation in 27 North Alabama and Mississippi counties.

Sinking Fund Debted

Andrews, speaking for himself and Short, said the compromise did not contain two provisions the House advocated: A sinking fund providing for the amortization of the bonds and "definite provision" restricting the territory in which the TVA could operate.

But May, long a foe of TVA, said the compromise agreement "means much to the stabilization of all business."

The terms . . . not only reduce the proposed bond issue from $100,000,000 to $61,500,000, a saving of nearly $40,000,000 to the taxpayers, but also and primarily earmark every dollar of those bonds and define the territory, as concerns the bond issue in question, in which the money can be spent," he said.

Reassures Investors

Asked whether the compromise should not restore confidence of investors, Mr. Roosevelt replied he did not believe that was needed, as was shown by a large bond issue to refinance a firm in Oregon operating next to the Bonneville and Grand Coulee power projects of the Federal Government.

The issue went over big, the President remarked, and evidently the investing public did not believe all it read.

On Capitol Hill

Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, the Democratic leader, said yesterday the House would be ready to adjourn within three weeks, "if not before."

Adjournment, Rayburn told his press conference, "depends, of course, on how fast the committees work on such as the pending and housing bills."

Prediction by Chairman Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, that legislation to stop issuance of tax-exempt securities would be put by until next session appeared to remove another barrier to early adjournment.

Despite two fractured ribs as a result of a fall in a bathtub in his home earlier in the day, Representative Smith (Republican), of Ohio, appeared before the House Banking Committee yesterday afternoon to oppose the $800,000,000 housing bill.

The nomination of Sam E. Whitaker, of Tennessee, to be a judge of the United States Court of Claims was approved by the Senate.

Also approved were the nominations of Armond W. Scott as judge for the District of Columbia, and Martin I. Walsh as judge for the Northern District of California.

Recovered after several weeks' illness, Senate Minority Leader Charles McNary, of Oregon, returned to his duties in the Senate yesterday. As he entered the chamber, McNary was quickly surrounded by his friends.

Representative McCormack (Democrat), of Massachusetts, declared that the attack on the Supreme Court by President Frank

J. Hogan, of the American Bar Association, "was the most brutal attack on the Supreme Court I have ever read, and made by the head of the biggest bar association in the country."

Had a member of the Roosevelt Administration made the attack instead of Hogan, it would have been termed "treason," he asserted.

Representative Crowther (Republican), of New York, said it was considered bad taste to criticize the Court a few years ago, "but lately it seems to be the fashion to talk about the Court the same as any other body."

Harbord Urges Draft Act to Prepare U. S.

War Referendum Too Slow, General Tells U. Va. Institute

Special Dispatch to The Post.
Charlottesville, Va., July 11.—Major Gen. James G. Harbord, A. E. F. chief of staff, tonight urged immediate enactment of a selective service act, to go into effect at the moment war might be declared.

"This would eliminate the chance of a disastrous delay while Congress, already having declared war, voted for selective service, as it inevitably would," Gen. Harbord told the University of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs.

A popular referendum before declaration of war "would end all opportunity of defense until an enemy has brought actual war to our homes," he asserted. Such legislation as the Ludlow amendment "would fatally cripple the diplomatic powers of the President and State Department," he added.

Deplores Relief Vote

Gen. Harbord, who is chairman of the board of the Radio Corporation of America, expressed concern at a drift in this country toward Governmental paternalism and the increasing tendency of great numbers to look to the State for support.

"Men and women on relief," like citizens of the District of Columbia, should surrender their vote, he recommended. "It is too much like a judge sitting in an action in which he has a financial interest. They should regain the suffrage when they have again found their place in enterprise independent of the Government." He added that he intended "no slur upon worthy individuals."

"There is even a good case for those students of government who believe that all persons drawing salaries from the Government should give up their votes during that term," he maintained.

French Liberties Held Lost

Dr. Leo Gershow, history professor at Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, N. Y., told the institute that France is rapidly losing its liberties and will lose them all in the event of war.

The republic "will salvage enough of her old humanity" to avoid fascism, however, while the "anti-collectivist spirit and structure of French society" will prevent communism, Dr. Gershow predicted. He saw in "some remote day" if war is averted, "another chance" for the French doctrine of equality.

In a morning symposium on medical care Thomas C. Boushall, president of the Morris Plan Bank of Virginia, Richmond, said the layman sees the problem of adequate medical service "as a practical matter of improved organization and liaison between the medical profession and the people."

Group Medicine

The issue cannot "be met and discharged by a fanatical humanitarian gesture in the futile appropriation of millions or billions of dollars of Federal funds," he asserted. Federal imposition of compulsory medical insurance upon any selected classes would threaten the democracy, Boushall said.

Expansion of group medical care will go far to spread the services of America's 125,000 doctors around the population, he declared, without requiring any statute to be administered by "bureaucrats who may or may not be intelligent, honest, alert or active."

Dr. Carrington Williams, professor of clinical surgery in the Medical College of Virginia, said the necessary changes in the present organization of medical services should be made "in a slow and orderly manner" preserving existing custom and institutions as far as they are compatible with efficiency.

Dr. William H. Stauffer, Virginia public welfare commissioner, contended there is no evidence of regimentation resulting from old-age benefits and unemployment insurance and said he saw no reason why it should come from a Governmental program for medical care.

If the Federal Government goes into the field of medical service, Virginia would do well to cooperate in the program, he said.

President, Hull Mourn Death of Sam McReynolds

Funeral Train to Leave Here Today For Chattanooga Rites

A Southern Railway train will leave Union Station at 4:55 p. m. today to carry the body of Samuel Davis McReynolds back to his native Tennessee with a funeral party.

Judge McReynolds, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, died at 6:15 a. m. yesterday in his Washington residence, 3261 Arcadia place northwest, after a nine-months fight against a failing heart. During the last four days the 67-year-old legislator had been kept alive beneath an oxygen tent.

The House of Representatives where Mr. McReynolds had held a seat continuously since 1923 as a representative of the Chattanooga district, yesterday suspended its rules limiting funeral committees to four, and adopted a resolution authorizing Speaker Bankhead to name a delegation of 15. They will accompany the body to Chattanooga for funeral services at 2:30 p. m. tomorrow in the Centenary Methodist Church.

Tribute Paid on Floor

Speaker Bankhead, out of the city yesterday, will name the funeral committee this morning.

Vice President Garner named five Democratic Senators—McKellar, Tennessee; Stewart, Tennessee; Connally, Texas; Russell, Georgia; Burke, Nebraska; and Miller, Arkansas—to attend the funeral.

The House yesterday spent an extraordinary hour and a quarter devoted to memorializing Judge McReynolds, one of its best liked members. Nearly a score of Representatives rose from their seats to deliver short eulogies before the House voted its traditional adjournment of respect.

President Roosevelt wrote Mr. McReynolds that her husband had brought to his public duties exceptional ability, integrity and great capacity for work and, latterly, as chairman of the important Committee on Foreign Affairs, he rendered high public service.

He and Mr. McReynolds, the President recalled, found themselves "in accord on paramount issues, and it has been a great loss to me to be deprived of his counsel and advice during the period of his illness when questions of great importance have been before us."

Cites Long Friendship

"Ours has been a long and unbroken friendship, strengthened through our years of association and delightful comradeship," the President added.

One of the first to pay tribute to the memory of an old friend was Secretary of State Hull. He, with Mrs. Hull, went to the McReynolds residence with their condolences. The Secretary, in a statement, said he had never known "a more honest or faithful public servant, or a more loyal friend."

There was a time in his life when genial, sandy-haired Sam McReynolds was anything but loved by a rather large number of people in his native State. That was while he was a criminal court judge at Chattanooga. He was a stern jurist. During the 20 years he served on the bench, hundreds of men who violated the State's bone-dry laws left his courtroom with long prison sentences.

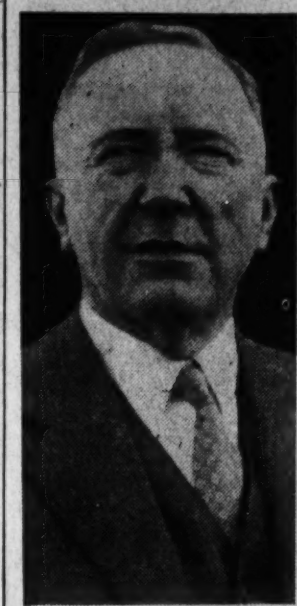

Tennessee's moonshiners and bootleggers came to fear and hate him so realistically that Mr. McReynolds once observed he was "afraid to go to bed at night for fear that someone, trying to get me, might bring down the whole house on my family."

Bloom in Line for Post

In the House, Mr. McReynolds developed wide influence through personal touch with its members. As chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee he steered to passage the original neutrality legislation and its subsequent modifications.

Representative Sol Bloom, of New York, acting committee chairman during Mr. McReynolds' long illness, becomes its ranking majority member and, under Congressional seniority custom, would succeed to the chairmanship.

Mr. McReynolds' lifelong ambition was to be a United States Senator. In 1938 he had determined to enter the race against former Senator George L. Berry. But President Roosevelt, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, a fellow Tennessean and one of the judge's closest friends; Speaker Bankhead and other influential members of the House prevailed upon Mr. McReynolds to remain as Foreign Affairs chairman.

REP. SAM D. McREYNOLDS

Mr. McReynolds' illness forced him home from his office last October 10. He never returned.

Mr. McReynolds had been chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee since 1933. He yearned to London as a delegate to the World Economic Conference. The late Speaker of the House Joseph W. Byrnes, another Tennessean, had said: "Sam is probably the best equipped man in the House to represent this country at London."

Close Friend of Hull's

In Washington, Secretary Hull and Mr. McReynolds were seen together so often that they became known as the "Tennessee twins." Both came to Congress from the Tennessee judiciary. Both were studious, reserved. Each was born on a farm. Mr. McReynolds near Pikeville, Blount County, April 16, 1872.

Mr. McReynolds was educated in the schools of his native county, at People's College at Pikeville and at Cumberland University, where he received his B. A. He read law in the office of Senator J. B. Frazier, was admitted to the bar in 1893 at the age of 21 and moved to Chattanooga two years later.

Mrs. McReynolds, the former Mary C. Davenport, whom Mr. McReynolds married in 1910, and their daughter, Mrs. Darrell St. Claire, of Washington, were at the bedside when Mr. McReynolds died. A brother, T. V. McReynolds, of Pikeville, and a sister, Mrs. W. J. Stamper, of Vanceburg, Ky., also survive.

Fatal Train Wreck Laid to High Speed

By The Associated Press

The Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday blamed excessive speed on a sharp curve for the derailment of a Norfolk & Western Railway freight train at Pembroke, Va., May 26. Two railway employees were killed.

Surviving members of the crew estimated the train's speed at 35 to 45 miles an hour at the time of the accident.

Air Expansion Hits Snag of Bidding Rule

Army's 5,500-Plane Program Faces Delay, Congress Told

Army chiefs testified yesterday that the 5,500 military plane program probably will be delayed from a year to 18 months unless Congress acts to suspend competitive bidding for the next two years.

Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson and Maj. Gen. Henry H. Arnold, Chief of Air Corps, told the House Military Committee that experience with the first air orders has not only convinced them that the program will not be completed on time under present law, but that one of the prime objectives of the plan—expansion of the Nation's airplane production capacity—cannot be realized.

Ask Direct Contracts

They asked authority to negotiate contracts with airplane companies, subject to the 12 per cent profit limitation of existing law and the inspections by Government auditors. Unless this is done, Johnson said, three or four of the large companies will get all of the business—orders they cannot carry out on time.

Several members of the committee expressed opposition to the proposal—which was backed up by a letter from President Roosevelt declaring it of "prime importance"—and after a short executive session a vote was delayed until Friday. Opposition came not only from Republicans, who have several times voted to spread the airplane program over three to four years, but also from Democrats who fear relaxation of competitive bidding rules.

Cites Prospective Delays

Gen. Arnold told the group that the letting of contracts in the usual manner takes from three to seven months longer than if directly negotiated, and that further delays up to an estimated 18 months will result from plants being unable to fill orders on time. He said the larger companies are bidding on new orders even though their plants are full and they are now paying damages for failure to make deliveries on time.

"Payment of penalties simply puts money into the Treasury," he declared. "We're interested in getting our planes on time."

The committee also heard Brig. Gen. George C. Marshall, acting chief of staff, urge that the heads of the four armies be given the rank of lieutenant general. They speedily approved his request.

U. S. Witness in Bridges Case Admits Red Trial Perjury

San Francisco, July 11 (AP).—Major Laurence Milner, a principal Government witness in the deportation hearing of Harry Bridges, admitted on the witness stand today he had testified falsely under oath at a criminal syndicalism trial at Portland, Oreg.

Milner, after relating charges of communist plots for revolution and meetings he said were attended by Bridges, was cross-questioned by Richard Gladstein, C. I. O. attorney for the Bridges defense committee.

Milner related he had been approached by Stanley Morton Doyle, investigated by the La Follette Senate Civil Liberties Committee, at Portland, when Milner was a character witness for Dirk Dejong. He testified Doyle approached him with the offer of a job if Milner would change his testimony in the Dejong case, which certified Dejong's good character and moral habits.

Gladstein then brought in a transcript of the Portland case in which Doyle had asked Milner whether he "had ever been offered any inducement in the form of money or any reward for changing his testimony in the Dejong case."

In the Portland trial Milner replied "No, sir."

Milner admitted that "I did swear falsely in the Dejong case." Earlier Milner charged Bridges' 1934 policy on the longshore union dealings was dictated by Communist headquarters in New York and testified he had heard a Communist revolution plot described in "many speeches and conversations" with Communist leaders in the Pacific Northwest.

He said the Communist leaders

"spoke of building up an organization of labor unions, causing labor strife, and then perhaps in case of war taking advantage of the situation by force and violence."

He asserted Bridges' policy toward the shipowners was turned down and then revised by "Communist headquarters in New York, the Communist orders being delivered through Morris Rapoport, of Seattle."

Wagner Health Bill Doomed, Predicts Taft

Senator Addresses Doctors at Hospital Dedication Exercises

Senator Robert A. Taft (Republican), of Ohio, a member of the Senate subcommittee considering the Wagner national health bill, yesterday said there is ground for the belief it points toward State medicine and predicted shelving of the measure at this session.

Speaker at cornerstone-laying exercises at the new Doctors' Hospital, in the 1800 block of I street northwest, the potential Republican Presidential candidate in 1940 warned against a health program "dominated by half-baked theorists or by those who believe in a totalitarian state, directing the lives and caring for the health of all its citizens through the mechanical and usually careless action of Government bureaus."

Hearings to be Resumed

After an intermission of several weeks, hearings are to be resumed tomorrow morning on the Wagner bill by the subcommittee of the Senate Committee on Education and Labor. Scheduled to testify are Representative Jacob Thorkelson (Republican), of Montana, and representatives of the American Osteopathic Association.

Dr. Charles Stanley White, Washington surgeon and president of Doctors' Hospital, Inc., presided at the ceremonies, conducted six months after the ground breaking. He laid the stone, assisted by Dr. Oscar E. Hunter, secretary, and Dr. James Alexander Lyon, a member of the board of directors.

A "time capsule" placed inside the corner stone contained a copy of the Bible, a copy of the Annals of the District Medical Society for June, 1939, copies of the Washington daily newspapers and the Alexandria Gazette, $1.91 in coins and miscellaneous documents.

Addressing an audience of approximately 500, consisting largely of doctors, nurses and hospital representatives, Senator Taft praised the initiative of the medical profession of the District in working out its own problems without lying down on the Government.

Foresees Medical Care Program

He predicted the same profession will have much to say about the enactment of a Federal program of medical care, which he said he thinks will be adopted in 1940.

"The present bill," said Taft, "seems to me needlessly complicated. . . . The doctors feel very strongly, and I think justifiably, that while the Wagner bill does not itself contain specifically a program of socialized medicine, it is proposed by those who favor socialized medicine and is open to the suspicion that it will afford a vehicle through which they may put their State-controlled medical care into effect."

He asserted his belief lack of medical service in many parts of the Nation has been exaggerated. This is particularly true, he declared, with regard to hospital facilities.

Doctors Hospital, with 250 beds, is scheduled to be completed in January.

McNutt's Personal Campaign Halted

again. McNutt's chances, moreover, have been improved, as he has Administration recognition and will not be speaking through the country without the support of a high public office.

McNutt to be Kept Busy

There has been some speculation that McNutt might become the President's running mate on a third term ticket. Senator Van Nuys (Democrat), of Indiana, friend and adviser of McNutt, said, however, that he didn't believe McNutt would be satisfied with anything less than the Presidential nomination.

The President said McNutt, in his new capacity, would be no more concerned with politics than Cabinet officers, justices of the Supreme Court, or members of Congress. Then, on second thought, he said he had better omit members of Congress.

McNutt's new assignment, he declared, will entail considerable coordinating work in the different States involving unemployment insurance, social security activities, and the United States Employment Service. He will attempt, he said, to effect savings in personnel by centralizing field offices. He will keep a watch on State assistance contributions, smooth out misunderstandings, and help the States to coordinate their own activities. He will have charge of the Administration's new health program.

In a third interview with the President yesterday, McNutt discussed the appointment of Wayne Coy, his secretary as High Commissioner, as assistant security administrator. Before taking the oath, McNutt will resign as High Commissioner.

McNutt revealed that he might not deliver his scheduled address August 11 before the national convention of Young Democrats of America at Pittsburgh.

War Veterans Honor Walter Reed Chaplain made to procure the expanded allotment and "we have every expectation it will come through."

As a result of Maj. Brown's offer to "loan" ten members of the police force for supervisory work, Commissioner Hazen announced he would call an immediate meeting of his newly created Playground Commission. Pending further action to provide off-street play facilities for vacationing youngsters, Hazen said he would urge the commission to adopt Maj. Brown's plan.

Safeguard for Children

"Although my men are not trained playground directors," said Maj. Brown, "I believe the presence of a uniformed policeman on the grounds would have a splendid effect. These men are carried on 'light duty' because of injuries, but they are capable of keeping order and overseeing the safety of children on these closed grounds."

Two youngsters were injured seriously yesterday within a few blocks of closed school playgrounds. 4 of 224 L. street southwest, ran into the street while playing and was struck by a passing truck. He was taken to Providence Hospital with a possible fractured skull. The nearest playground to his home is the Bowen School, at Third and K streets southwest. The gates on this ground are locked.

Vera Crockett, 6, of 431 V street northwest, was struck in front of her home and suffered a fractured shoulder and severe lacerations. She was treated at Freedmen's Hospital. The Gage School playground at Second and U streets northwest, is among those barred to children.

Canal Boats' Horns to Be Heard Again

C. & O. Lockhouses Are Being Rebuilt for Revival of Old Traffic

So that the horn of the old canal boat may be heard again in the land, a crew of CCC boys from Carderock is tearing down the chimneys and replacing worn-out timbers in Lockhouse No. 5 on the swampy edge of the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal at Brookmont, Md.

At the same time, in a quiet, high-walled room at the National Archives Building, T. Sutton Jett, research technician for the National Park Service, is studying records of the company which carried on George Washington's dream of a waterway to the West. What he learns from the dog-eared volumes will be used in reconstruction of this lockhouse and 14 others between Washington and Seneca, Md. It is all part of the Government's plan to tunnel the canal route, which begins west of Georgetown, into a recreational area.

Lockhouse No. 5, which was built about 1850, will return to the days of its glory when its tender operated not only the lift lock but also the feeder lock which raised water from the Potomac River water still flows in from this point to furnish some of the power used in manufacturing plants in lower Georgetown.

While the dust of 80 years rises from the decayed beams being removed from the house, only the walls of which will remain in the renovation progress, Mrs. Walter King, its occupant until Monday, lives temporarily in a tent nearby. In the records of the C. & O. Canal Co. are 30 years of service chalked up to Mrs. King who, when the company ceased operations in 1924, continued on its pay roll until the Interior Department took over the area last fall.

When the 22 miles of locks between Washington and Seneca are restored, it is planned to use a packet boat along the stretch, with horses using the deserted towpath for the first time in 15 years. Several of the lockhouses will have their own tenders. A lock man also will travel with the boat to operate places where tenders are not in regular occupancy.

The new protection program made possible by appropriations obtained from Congress for the first time this year, will be under the direction of William J. McDonald, senior forester of the General Land Office. Additional details will be worked out at conferences scheduled for September. It is planned that CCC groups will co-operate with Department of Agriculture Forestry Service forces when the final program is completed.

An antifire educational program is to be immediately instituted. Of the land to be covered by the new service, 40,000,000 acres consist of dense forests of white spruce and birch; 110,000,000 acres of open woodland and grass land, and about 100,000,000 acres of tundra vegetation—fodder for roving reindeer.

Fire Protection Plan for Alaska Forests Mapped

Should forest and brush fires come to Alaska, 250,000,000 acres will be protected in an extensive program now being worked out by the General Land Office. With less than 15 inches of rainfall a year, forests and grass lands in the northern territory are liable to devastating conflagrations unless there is adequate control.

found Walters holding his wife's head. She added Walters appeared hysterical, and exclaimed they had had a happy household. The nurse disclosed that Mrs. Walters was an expectant mother and was "very happy about it."

Marriage Happy

Col. O'Brien described Mrs. Walters as "very happy in her new married life" with Walters, as shown by letters he and Mrs. O'Brien had received. He said she had no financial or other problems and added she had been familiar with firearms since childhood but was "very careless" in handling them.

Harry Fletcher, captain of detectives, testified that when he visited the Walters home, "it looked like a suicide from the sequence of events." Asked if he had a present opinion, he replied: "It appears to me on the face of things that it was a suicide."

Funeral services for Mrs. Walters were held during the inquest. Her former husband, Alexander B. Hagner, of Warrenton, Va., did not attend the inquest. His attorney said he planned to leave Reno by train with his two children born to Mrs. Hagner Walters.

Dr. Horace J. Brown, testified he was called to the Walters residence by telephone and was informed by a nurse that "Mrs. Walters has shot herself."

He quoted the nurse as saying Mrs. Walters had asked for the gun, saying she wanted "to oil it."

Taxi Influx Leads Hyattsville to Seek Tax on Drivers

Concerned over the recent influx of taxicabs, Hyattsville, Md., officials yesterday were considering imposing a municipal tax on the drivers.

Corporation Counsel Waldo Burnside was instructed to investigate the legality of such a tax after residents had complained the hackers were occupying too many of the town's parking spaces.

At least four companies are operating in the town, the mayor and town council were told, with no official parking stand for any.

German Food Supply Held Ready for War

U. S. Agency Hears Stores Would Last Longer Than in 1914-18

Germany is prepared today at ration-card levels, to feed its population through a longer war than the struggle of 1914-18.

That report, based on first-hand information from the Reich, now is circulating in at least one Federal agency responsible for information on foreign economic conditions. The Post learned yesterday.

Two important "ifs" go with the prediction. First is an assumption, which held good during the World War, that no German farming land will be fought over or occupied by an enemy. Second is the belief the Nazis will not wage war unless confident of access to food supplies in Hungary, part of the Balkans and part of the Baltic region.

Ready at Any Time

As far as German food supplies are concerned, war could begin any time this summer, it is asserted in the same government office. The Nazi high command need not wait until the harvest is in, because they do not plan to call any important amount of farm labor to the colors. Agricultural workers—at least for the first six months of war—are compared to railway and munitions workers as civilians whose jobs are indispensable to any German military effort.

Chief importance of the "harvest schedule," it is stated here, is that German leaders would prefer to know the size of the 1939 crops before undertaking any war likely to continue into 1940. Approximate harvest dates for Germany are as follows:

Rye—July 15-August 1.
Wheat—July 23-August 7.
Barley, oats—August 5-September 1.
Spring grains—August 10-15.
Potatoes—September 10-October 15.

Although the amount of these vital supplies available for the coming winter will not be known until the various crops are actually harvested, it is pointed out that information now available indicates an average crop of all, with rye slightly better than usual. Barring withering heat or heavy rainfall between now and August 1, the picture is not expected to change.

Dairy Needs Met

The foot-and-mouth epidemic which last year cut down German cattle production has been checked, it is reported, and the Reich now is producing all its milk and nearly 90 per cent of its butter requirements.

The German people, of course, are getting much less butter now than they would like to use. One official pointed out, "but the idea is that they will accept as little—or less—in war time than they have been getting during the last two years."

Another Government expert summed up the situation this way: "All other things equal, the German government would rather not start anything until the crops are in. But the outbreak of war during harvest season would be just as inconvenient to the opposition as to Germany itself. If a favorable moment developed this month, Germany wouldn't wait just because of the harvest."

Spanish War Vets To Fete McLeish

George G. McLeish, newly appointed department commander of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, will be the guest of the United Spanish War Veterans of the District of Columbia at their annual celebration at Marshall Hall on Saturday. The military division of the Holy Comforter Boys' Band will provide music under the direction of Louis J. Goucher, United States Navy Band. Assisting Department Commander Thomas F. Donovan will be Color Sgt. William G. Stirk, Will N. Barnes, Elvin M. Luskey, regent of the Military Order of the Sergeant; Charles Cohen, Charles H. Appich, Robert E. Washburne, Charles W. McCaffery, Sam McWilliams, Tom Binkley and the ladies of the auxiliaries.

There's a Good Reason You're Constipated!

When there's something wrong with you, the first rule is: get at the cause. If you are constipated, don't endure it first and cure it afterward. Find out what's giving you the trouble.

Chances are it's simple if you eat the super-refined foods most people do: meat, white bread, potatoes. It's likely you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean a lot of food. It's a kind of food that isn't consumed in the body, but leaves a soft "bulky" mass in the intestines and helps a bowel movement.

If this is your trouble, you should eat a natural "bulk" producing food—such as one as the crunchy, toasted, ready-to-eat cereal—Kellogg's All-Bran. All-Bran is the ounce of prevention that's worth a pound of emergency relief. Eat it every day, drink plenty of water, and "Join the Regulars." All-Bran is made by Kellogg's in Battle Creek.

"MOON LOVE." Biggest musical sensation of the moment, "Moon Love," which represents the skillful mangling of the andante of Tchaikowsky's Fifth Symphony, was played first in Washington more than a year ago by the Rainbow Room orchestra, directed by Milton Davis.

A girl patron of the Rainbow Room recently interrupted Milton's novachording to ask that he play more popular numbers. "Now why don't you play this new 'Moon Love'?" she complained. He did. And followed it with "Our Love" (a swipe from Tchaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet"). The lass was no end pleased. "Young lady," said Milton, "you may not know it, but you are what I call a real devotee of Tchaikowsky."

British Airmen In Sham Raid Over France

Mighty Sky Armada Demonstrates Solidarity of Allies

Special Cable to The Post.
London, July 11.—More than 120 of the finest heavy and medium bombers of the royal air force participated today in the most impressive and significant sham air raid yet staged in air-conscious Europe.

Taking off this morning from air-dromes in the English midlands, the British planes pointed southward and "spread their wings" out over France.

Never before had so many military planes of one country carried out an expedition of this character over the territory of another. Sealed orders, when broken in the air, instructed the heavy bombers, totalling about eight units, to make a round-trip, nonstop flight to Bordeaux, on the Bay of Biscay, a two-way distance of nearly 1,200 miles. Similar orders provided a shorter flight for about 40 medium bombers, passing above the French cities of Le Treport, Orleans and Le Mans, near Cherbourg.

All 120-odd planes had returned to their home port by 5 o'clock this afternoon without mishaps and without touching French or any other foreign soil.

First of Series
Today's sham air raid was the first of a long series to be made under an arrangement concluded with the French air ministry. Apart from demonstrating Anglo-French solidarity as allies in the face of the current war danger, these flights had the dual purpose of providing "wing space" and new territory for the training of British military pilots, many of whom in wartime would find themselves based at French military airports.

Though they decline to provide exact figures, British air authorities express belief their monthly production of military planes now closely approaches or equals that of the Germans. The whole military aviation set-up in this country is considered far superior to what it was during the September crisis last year.

Mass flights of French planes to England and return will repay the visits of British aircraft, further emphasizing the solidarity of the two air forces.

The visit to France of 32 bombers and pursuit planes which began yesterday is not connected with the series of training flights which was initiated today. These 32 planes are to participate in a combined Anglo-French air demonstration above Paris July 14, the French national holiday.

French to Parade Might
Paris, July 11 (AP).—The cabinet approved plans today for a great Bastille Day celebration Friday, showing the world in general and the Rome-Berlin axis powers in particular the might of combined British-French land and air power.

Premier Daladier, who seldom receives foreign diplomats, except the United States and British Ambassadors, conferred with German Ambassador Count von Helldorf shortly after the cabinet meeting reviewed the international situation.

The subject of the premier's talk was not known. At the same time, Foreign Minister Bonnet received United States Ambassador Bullitt and later British Ambassador Philips. "July 4" marks the 150th anniversary of the fall of the Bastille July 14, 1789, at the start of the French Revolution.

To Review Marchers
Leslie Hore-Belisha, British war secretary, and high commanders of Britain's land, sea and air forces have accepted Daladier's invitation to stand with President Lebrun and the French cabinet to review the Bastille Day parade before the Unknown Soldier's tomb.

They will see 30,000 troops—the pick of France's home and colonial armies—and 450 British soldiers, a "sample" battalion. Thirty British bombers and 22 other Royal Air Force fighting craft which will join 100 fast French warplanes in an air review.

Roosevelt and Hull, Beaten 12-11, Renew Fight for Six-Point Neutrality Program

his bill to repeal wall neutrality legislation and revert to international law. Only a simple majority vote is necessary to discharge a Senate committee.

Furges Defeat Drive

By a one-vote margin, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee early yesterday had outkeyed an Administration move to call up the House-approved neutrality bill and agreed instead to postpone until next session further consideration of the question.

The motion was put by Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, member of a Senate isolation coalition, and took precedence over a motion by Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, to proceed with the House bill.

Turning the vote into one of the most serious Administration defeats of the session, Senators Gillette, of Iowa, and George, of Georgia, targets of unsuccessful Administration "purge" efforts in last year's primaries, voted to postpone. Both had been silent on their intentions until the last moment. Leaders had counted at least on one of the votes—that of Gillette. The unpredictable Senator Borah (Republican), of Idaho, who previously had indicated his personal opposition to postponement, voted for it in the end.

Following is how the committee voted:
Against postponement—Pittman, Barkley, Connally, Harrison, Wagner, Thomas (Utah), Guffey, Murray, Schwelbensch, Pepper and (by proxy) Green—11.

For postponement—George, Gillette, Clark, White, Reynolds, Van Nuys, Shipstead, Vandenberg, La Follette, Johnson, Borah and Capper—12.

Japanese Embargo Next
The Foreign Relations Committee immediately turned its attention to two pending bills authorizing an embargo on shipment of commodities to any violator of the nine-power pact. Aiming at stopping the movement of goods to Japan for her war against China, Pittman said the committee will meet Friday to consider action.

Pittman, himself author of one of the bills, said he thought "prospects of passage are good." He declined to link it with the neutrality issue, and said he would oppose any effort to attach the neutrality bill as a rider.

Across the Capitol, Representative Bloom, of New York, acting chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee and definitely slated for full chairmanship following yesterday's death of the incumbent, Representative McReynolds, of Tennessee, set House hearings on similar proposals for a Japanese embargo for July 18.

Two Proposals Pending
The Pittman Japanese embargo proposal would empower the President, when any signatory of the Nine-Power Pact endangers the lives or violates the rights of United States citizens, to embargo shipments to that nation of arms, ammunition, implements of war, oil, gasoline, iron, steel or metals of all descriptions.

The Schwelbensch bill, also pending and based on another clause of the Nine-Power Pact, authorizes an embargo of trade in all except agricultural commodities. Unlike the Pittman plan, the Schwelbensch proposal would give Congress 80 days in which to disapprove a Presidential proclamation.

Senator Clark, a leading opponent of the Administration neutrality proposals, said he would support the proposed Japanese embargo if assurances are given that the neutrality bill will not be offered as a rider. Pittman said he thought leaders would give such assurances, but it might prove impossible to bind individual Senators.

Senator Bone (Democrat), of Washington, said he feared such an embargo would make the United States itself a "violin" of the 1911 armistice and commerce treaty with Japan. Pittman countered that the United States is not liable to the 1911 treaty conditions when Japan itself violates the Nine Power pact.

Britain Plans Propaganda War With Axis

Appropriates Funds To Build Up Bureau Under Earl of Perth

Special Cable to The Post.

London, July 11.—The British government will spend upwards of £300,000 ($1,410,000) during the current fiscal year in building up its propaganda machinery to compete with Germany and Italy in the "war of word and nerves" now being waged by the European press and radio.

Supplementary budget estimates published today disclosed that the government's new "foreign publicity department" at the foreign office, formed last month with the Earl of Perth as its director to provide the skeleton of a full grown wartime propaganda ministry would require £549,900. Of this, £79,000 is for the "establishment" of the department and the balance for "expenses" in promoting various forms of favorable British publicity abroad, not including broadcasts in foreign languages.

An additional £705,000 is earmarked for the activities of the British council which is to "promote a wider knowledge of Great Britain and the English language abroad, and to develop closer cultural relations between Great Britain and other countries."

Preparations and plans for the war-time ministry of information will require £188,000 more in "salaries and expenses." Provision is made for the purchase of material and equipment and other preparatory expenses required for wartime publicity purposes in the colonial dependencies and $23,500 as a grant for additional staffs in the British press bureau at Jerusalem where Britain tries to combat the influence of Arab crooners from Italian radio stations.

Meanwhile, with estimates for British war preparedness expenditure for the current fiscal year already at a record figure of $2,961,000,000 preparations were being made today to boost the figure still further next week.

Open Rebellion Against Franco Is Reported

Loyalist Militia Still Fighting in Hills, Say Messages to France

By International News Service.

London (Wednesday), July 12.—An official Spanish news agency bulletin, received at Hendaye, France, today admitted the outlawed Spanish republican militia still is in open rebellion against Gen. Franco in the hills in Asturias and Oviedo provinces, the Daily Express reported.

Reports from Gibraltar yesterday told of the landing of Moroccan foreign legionnaires at Algeiras in support of rumors of such a rebellion in the Province of Salamanca. Gibraltar rumors also held this revolt responsible for a powder magazine explosion Monday near Salamanca in which more than 400 were killed and 1,500 injured.

Open Clashes Increasing
Buoro-Madame, France (at the Spanish Frontier), July 11.—Refugees escaping into France along smugglers' trails brought unconfirmed reports tonight of increasing internal unrest in Spain.

These refugees, mostly leftist enemies of Gen. Franco's regime, declared open clashes between Carlists (monarchists) and Falangists (fascists) had broken out in Andalusia and Catalonia. Recurring reports in recent weeks told of growing rivalry between those groups, both supporters of Franco in the civil war.

The refugees' stories could not be confirmed either through independent or Spanish nationalist sources. (Dispatches direct from Madrid and Barcelona made no reference to any friction.)

Police Force Strengthened
(Telephoned advices from Zaragoza to Madrid said that "complete normalcy" prevailed at Zaragoza. Official sources said nothing unusual had occurred at Bilbao or Santander, on the Bay of Biscay coast.) Dispatches from Hendaye several days ago told of similar clashes between royalist and Spanish fascist factions in Navarre and Guipuzcoa Provinces in which, they said, at least one man was killed.

British Warship at Tsingtao After Stoning of Consulate

By the Associated Press

Shanghai, July 11.—A British warship steamed into Tsingtao today as that North China port became a new center of spreading British-Japanese friction.

The British consulate was stoned Monday. British said the demonstration was Japanese-inspired and sent the 900-ton escort vessel Lowestoft to Tsingtao from nearby Weihaiwei. The British consul protested vigorously to Japanese authorities.

One report; not officially confirmed, said the Lowestoft landed bluejackets to protect the consulate, which was damaged by bricks and firecrackers hurled through its windows.

Briton Reported Stripped

British-Japanese hostility flared anew at Tientsin, north of Tsingtao, where British reported another Briton was stripped by Japanese sentries at the border of the British and French concessions, blockaded by the Japanese army since June 14.

Dispatches from Kaigun said the Japanese had placed the military attaché of the British Embassy on trial by a military court on a charge of espionage.

Japanese reports said anti-British agitation had spread to Tientsin, important center in northern Shantung, where the Chinese magistrate had banned further entry of British goods.

Military Attache on Trial
Indignation of the British community at Tientsin was aroused when Ivor House said he had been compelled to strip to his underclothes for examination at a Japanese barrier. Other Britons with him were not molested. House had been made to strip on a previous occasion.

An unsuccessful attempt of a Japanese naval patrol to land on the British bund at Tientsin in pursuit of a Chinese boatman also increased friction. The Japanese withdrew when British police reinforcements arrived.

Domei, the Japanese news agency, reported from Kaigun, northwest of Peiping, that a Japanese military court last Wednesday began the trial of Lieut. Col. C. R. Spear, British military attaché whom the Japanese have held since May 28 despite repeated British demands for his release.

Japanese assert that Spear, who

Grim Reminder

A grim reminder of Washington's helplessness situation is found in the prospect that several thousand District employees may wait in vain on Saturday for their pay checks. No mismanagement of local financing accounts for this threat. No economic disaster in the community explains it. The situation is wholly due to the failure of Congress to agree on a local revenue bill.

Yesterday the Senate went far in the direction of compromise as can reasonably be expected. It scuttled the Overton formula, which it had earlier approved with but one dissenting vote, by accepting the conference agreement on a Federal lump-sum payment of $6,500,000. And it approved a local income tax which, if moderate in comparison with the House proposal, is at least a concession from the viewpoint of many Senators.

Today should demonstrate whether or not the House will agree to this settlement. If it fails to do so a literal breakdown of the mechanics of local government will be in prospect and this for no better reason than an intransigent attitude in the lower chamber.

Such an outcome would be deplorable from every viewpoint. Not least so because it would raise the question as to whether a legislature incompetent to govern the Capital City effectively is a body in which the Nation as a whole can place the trust essential to successful democratic government.

Mouth Of The Vistula

Of late not a week has passed without formal notice from some responsible British spokesman that Great Britain is fully prepared to live up to the terms of her alliance with Poland. Hitler can, therefore, harbor no illusion that an attack on any vital Polish interest can be effected without risk of a general war. In such a war, he knows, Great Britain would be lined up in opposition to Germany.

There are many indications that these warnings have made an impression on the Fuehrer. But it is also obvious that they have not halted the preparations being made by the Nazi regime to incorporate Danzig into the Third Reich at the first favorable opportunity. In other words, while Hitler has given heed to the speeches of Chamberlain, Halifax, De la Warr and other British statesmen who have voiced Britain's determination to resist further Nazi aggressions, he has still been inclined to act on the assumption that Danzig is outside the purview of the British guarantee to Poland.

Premier Chamberlain has now corrected that impression. He has plugged the one loophole of doubt that remained regarding British intentions. In his statement in the House of Commons on Monday he made it clear that Great Britain would stand firmly by Poland in resisting any Nazi coup to bring Danzig back into the Third Reich.

The language used by the British premier was moderate. He emphasized that "possible improvements" in the present Danzig arrangement might be made if a "clearer atmosphere" could be attained. But he denied that the present position of the Free City is basically unjust or illogical and he pledged Britain's support to Poland should the latter find it necessary to intervene in Danzig to prevent "unilateral action organized by surreptitious methods."

The fact is, as Mr. Chamberlain pointed out, that were Danzig in unrestrained possession of the Third Reich, the latter would be in a position to block Poland's access to the sea "and so exert an economic and military stranglehold upon her." The position of the Free City vis-a-vis Poland is, in this respect, comparable to the position of New Orleans in relation to the Mississippi Valley.

It will be recalled that when Napoleon took over Louisiana from Spain, even the strongly Francophile Jefferson found the situation alarming. In a letter to Robert Livingston, in April, 1802, he wrote: "The day that France takes possession of New Orleans . . . we must marry ourselves to the British fleet and nation." And Jefferson did not rest until the mouth of the Mississippi was safely under American control.

In much the same way as Jefferson felt about New Orleans, the Polish government feels about Danzig. It will not try to interfere with the government of the Free City which, as Mr. Chamberlain says, "is almost wholly a German city." But the political incorporation of Danzig in the Reich could not be accepted by the Poles without reliable guarantees of demilitarization and free navigation. For they know only too well the truth of the statement made by Frederick the Great that "who rules over the mouth of the Vistula and the City of Danzig will be more master of Poland than the King who rules there."

By One Vote

In explanation of his decisive vote in the Foreign Relations Committee, favoring postponement of neutrality legislation revision to the next session of Congress, Senator Gillette made a very revealing statement.

"I think it is unfortunate for us," he said, "to be put in the situation of enacting a neutrality policy when conditions are so acute that any action will be construed as applying to a particular situation rather than the general situation."

This argument has the merit of recognizing that any positive action by the United States in the matter of neutrality legislation will have a direct and vital bearing on the trend of events abroad. Certainly the abrogation by Congress at this time of the mandatory embargo on arms, ammunition and implements of war to belligerents would have the effect of favoring Great Britain and France.

Those nations control the seas. Germany and Italy do not. Were the present embargo lifted, Great Britain and France, whether at war or not, would be in a position to buy war supplies from us even as they are in a position to buy such vital war necessities as wheat, cotton, copper, oil and scrap iron.

What Senator Gillette apparently fails to recognize, however, is that if the United States refuses to modify the present neutrality law, this negative attitude will have just as direct and vital a bearing on the international situation as positive action would have.

By retaining the present embargo provision Germany and Italy are benefited. In the event of war the axis powers, just as their enemies, would be barred from purchasing arms in this country. But it would be of enormous advantage to them to have Great Britain and France deprived of American sources of supply of arms and munitions. And that factor may be enough, the balance of power in Europe being as delicate as it is, to determine their course of action.

Those Senators who insist that the interests of the United States demand no espousal of either side are theoretically right. But they are preaching a counsel of perfection that cannot be attained in the world as it is today, with the United States as influential as it is. The fact is that we take sides with every move we make, and equally so if we make no move at all.

There is still another revealing point in Senator Gillette's statement. The implication of his remark is that the time for the United States to consider neutrality legislation is not when there is a crisis but when there is none.

Obviously Congress has never previously acted on his advice. Neutrality laws were passed in 1935 and in 1937. Those could hardly be called years of untroubled peace. The world has been in a state of crisis for a long time and promises to continue in that unhappy condition for some time to come. And by the refusal of Congress to permit the United States to play an effective role in the effort to prevent war, this country is contributing to the perpetuation of this grim state of affairs.

The Hatch Bill

One measure that should certainly be disposed of before Congress adjourns is the Hatch bill "to prevent pernicious political activities." It has already been approved by the Senate and by the House Judiciary Committee. The House Rules Committee has also cleared the way for final legislative action.

The bill is an outgrowth of the scandals uncovered by a Senate committee prior to the 1938 elections. In general, it is designed to prevent politicians from exploiting the relief vote, and to safeguard those who are obtaining benefits from the Government in the free exercise of their rights as citizens. Even if no abuses had been brought to light last year, the fact that the Government is spending billions of dollars to aid various underprivileged groups would make imperative the erection of barriers against their exploitation.

The measure is not solely aimed at professional politicians, however. It seeks to eliminate the coercion of voters by any individual. Employers and labor leaders who attempt to intimidate their followers at election time might feel the weight of the law as readily as the candidate attempting to buy relief votes.

Several specific provisions are intended to take politics out of the WPA. Stiff penalties are provided for any official who deprives a person of a Federal job or relief benefits "on account of race, creed, color, or political activity." Disclosure of relief rolls for political purposes would be forbidden. Under a House Judiciary Committee amendment, politicians would be liable to punishment for receiving as well as for soliciting money from persons on relief. Premises of Federal jobs in return for support of any candidate would be unlawful.

Only Section 2 of the bill appears to have aroused controversy. Under this provision it would be unlawful for "any person employed in any administrative position by the United States . . . to use his official authority for the purpose of interfering with, or affecting the election of any candidate for the office of President, Vice President, Presidential elector, member of the Senate or member of the House of Representatives."

The House Judiciary Committee did not want this language to be so interpreted as to prevent a President, for example, from acting in behalf of his own candidacy for re-election. So it adopted an amendment to the effect that nothing in the section should be construed as modifying the rights of such officials to "participate in the activities of a political party."

It is difficult to see that this provision emasculates Section 2, as Senator Hatch contends. The prohibition against use of "official authority" to influence elections would stand. And the bill never attempted to prevent administrative officers from using their personal influence, as distinct from their "official authority," for political purposes.

Perhaps the whole section should be rewritten so as to differentiate between those administrative officers who should be wholly aloof from politics and the President and some members of his official family who must be expected to maintain an active status in party affairs.

Tragic Coincidence

There is tragic coincidence in the fact that Representative McReynolds died only a few hours before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, by a 12 to 11 division, yesterday voted to shelve further consideration of neutrality legislation for this session.

It is reasonable to suppose that the present almost hopeless confusion over one of the most vital subjects before the present Congress might not have arisen had the sure hand, the judicial temperament, the political sagacity of Congressman McReynolds been available to the Administration during these last months.

His recent absence from the Foreign Relations Committee of the House, of which he became chairman in 1932, was strongly felt. During these seven years Mr. McReynolds had evinced great skill in guiding complicated legislation through the House. His influence extended to the Senate, which was always inclined to treat his judgment with respect and his well-forethought opinions with due deference.

A native of Tennessee, Mr. McReynolds served on the bench of his State for 20 years before his first election to the House in 1922. His friends, in and out of Congress, were legion. He will be greatly missed both as a man and as a statesman.

To Cordell Hull, the loss will be particularly acute. These fellow-Tennesseans had much in common. And the Secretary of State could always count on the firm friendship, the good advice and the effective co-operation of one of the most able chairmen the House Foreign Relations Committee has ever possessed.

At The Watergate

Native Washingtonians, when you can find them, take as much pleasure in exaggerating the defects of the local climate as do Californians in exaggerating the merits of that which they possess. At this time of year the cave dweller customarily assures newcomers to Washington that they haven't felt anything yet. In August, they are apt to say, if you fetch a little soap in your pocket, you can wash your hands in the humidity.

Even at its worst, however, Washington in summer has much to recommend it, including beautiful parks, cool buildings and a glorious river within a few minutes walk of the heart of town. No other city of the East, nearly all of which suffer from much the same weather as ourselves, has as many amenities of this kind. And none anywhere has anything to overshadow the sunset symphonies, a new season of which will open here tonight. There are many other fine orchestras, of course, and other summer programs. But it is difficult to name an American municipality which can offer beautiful music in so beautiful a place.

Here we will sit and let the sound of music creep in our ears; soft stillness and the night become the touches of sweet harmony.

Our advantage will be the more appreciated this summer because the season at the Watergate will include for the first time a taste of opera. If only the weather tonight is not too cold for comfort!

Why does a woman always want some remembrance to forget a man by?

Unvaccinated Iowans

From the Des Moines Register.

The Iowa Department of Health is worried about smallpox. During April, the incidence of the disease in Iowa mounted to a new monthly high. Since Iowa has always been one of the black spots of the Nation as far as smallpox is concerned, the figures for April merely make Iowa blacker.

Smallpox is preventable. Of that there isn't the slightest doubt. Every State on the Eastern seacoast, from Maine to Florida, has a law making it compulsory for all school children to be vaccinated against smallpox before they can attend school.

The result is that these States today have not one single known case of smallpox within their borders, while Iowa's cases run into the hundreds.

Letters To The Editor

Full Hal

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With surprise, we learn that the really medium-sized animal is not man, nor even the mouse, but is the common house fly. He it is that marks the halfway point between the microscopic amoeba and the huge elephant and whale.

With similar surprise, we learn that the real halfway point between Fascism's microscopic beginnings of a few years ago and its avowed goal of world conquest has already been passed. In other words, Fascism's start from scratch compares with its present state as its present state compares with something more than world domination. Once Fascism has conquered a full half of this earth, its conquest of the remaining half will be mere child's play. Verily, "The beginning is half the thing!"

Two Sides To Most Issues

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Some time ago I wrote a letter criticizing your paper for upholding the foreign policy of the Administration and for giving us all that side of the story, both in your editorials and "Letters From The People."

I simply cannot concur with your foreign policy view, only because I do not think it is good, clear reasoning or common sense. I cannot believe it is possible to aid any nation at war, whether we sympathize with it or not, without eventually becoming involved ourselves. And the treatment we received for our support of England and France in the last war (which we entered for such highly idealistic reasons), plus the intrigues we now learn were practiced behind our back by those countries, plus the poor sportsmanship attitude of the French press of late, delivering stinging rebukes to us because Congress does not vote to their liking, all these make me feel these countries are not worthy of our support, but only wish to use us.

However, aside from being unable to embrace the collective security idea I think you have a grand paper and I really write this time to thank you for printing letters expressing views of people on the "other side of the fence." I congratulate you on printing the letter by Eleanor H. Finch, on so-called "Isolation." It is one of the finest for concise, clear thinking I ever read. Also the one on July 8 by W. F. Wilmoth.

I have been noticing you very frequently print letters not in accord with your own views. We appreciate it and it makes it a pleasure to read your paper. It doesn't seem so one-sided.

I congratulate you on several editorials lately, such as the one of July 8 headed, "Strike Against The Law." It is perfect. We need more like it concerning the many intolerable situations existing today. Such presenting of facts to the public by a good paper may help to return the United States to the country it once was, before it is too late. E. R. WALKER.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: You have in your issue of July 4 "An Isolationist View of France" by E. H. Finch. Would you allow me to show the fair lady that her analysis is slightly muddled? Your splendid editorials on the foreign situation deserve to be ranked as classics. I read them all twice or three times.

And then you actually sabotage your brain children by giving undue prominence to the letters of correspondents which, though written with honest intent, betray such a large disregard of history that they no doubt mislead a number of people who know no better.

I have proof that I went to France in 1916. And, although not born in France, never has a Frenchman

Free to Err?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Solicitor General Jackson asks the American bar and the country the rhetorical question:

Is it likely that when the fathers adopted the Fifth Amendment they meant to outlaw legislation which fixed wages or prices?

Certainly not. Only by leaving such possibilities open could we be free. No person, no people are free unless they are free to make fools of themselves as well as free to follow a sinner course.

The code of Hammurabi of Babylon adopted 4,000 years ago contained provisions for minimum wages. Wang Mang 2,000 years ago had fixed prices, as did Diocletian in Rome in 301 A.D. These schemes blew up and have been tried again and again in many places and at different times, ever to be discarded as burdensome and worthless in the onward march of the human race.

There is nothing in the Constitution forbidding us to embrace socialism, that mirage of imaginative iridescence—a mirage which will probably always be pursued by a certain portion of our people. Its lure, just as those of minimum wage and fixed prices, is perennial; their colors and meaning are different to every beholder.

Our supreme test comes from the evil effects of yet untoward tendencies of government to increase the costs and perplexities of living; by our reliance upon laws rather than upon labor; upon wishes rather than upon wisdom.

NATHAN BOONE WILLIAMS.

Peace And The Peace Pact

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The significance of the Brand-Kellogg Pact is that it constitutes a new rule of the law of nations, modifying the older law of belligerents and of neutrality. It not only outlaws a national policy warranting aggression on the rights of independent states and peoples, but on fair implication forecloses everything in the transaction of our citizens or in the policy and resultant action of our Government which would aid such outlawed policy and resultant warfare.

The peace pact thus constitutes an important step in the development of collective security, not relying on the Covenant of the League, nor upon defensive alliances, but really upon non-recognition and the collective consent of all nations to make it effective against war of aggression. In this view of the matter it created a new and universal "peace front" in no wise dependent upon external force for its maintenance.

Here, it differed from the League's system of sanctions most materially, making maintenance of the obligations of peace practically automatic by operation of a universal rule of law, and not the political action of League members through the imposition of sanctions or force.

To refuse the President the authority to act according to the obligations of the peace pact is to raise the whole issue as to the action of authorities and requires. The pact is a vital link in the chain which has been forged to bind all nations to just recourse to mediation, conciliation, and negotiation. It cannot be disregarded in defining our attitude in the event of a new world war. J. WATKINS-STENSON.

Harbor Patrol

A CHANCE visit to the Harbor Precinct brought to light some rather surprising information. While the subject was gruesome enough it was liberally spiced with ludicrous anecdotes which kept the conversational ball rolling quite merrily.

A genial lieutenant greeted me, and proceeded to answer my numerous questions. "Our duties? Well, let's see. There's regular patrol, suicides and attempted suicides—some we'd better let finish the job—drownings and draggins' for bodies that've never been recovered."

"Pretty awful at times, isn't it?"

The lieutenant shrugged. "You get hardened. Then there's always something croppin' up." He removed his pipe and spat reflectively.

"Or you might say, poppin' up. Take the case of the colored fellow who was out on the wall fahin'. He came bustin' in here like a runaway freight; was a sort of sick gray color, his eyes rollin' and scared so he couldn't say a word. Finally we got him talkin'. He'd seen a dead man. The thing had jumped out of the water right in front of him."

He grinned and went on. "The man was tellin' the truth, as he saw it. It's like this. A body stays down about three days in average weather, and contrary to general belief, it floats in a standing position. It comes slowly to the surface, then suddenly shoots out of the water to the waist. After that it drops back with just the head and shoulders visible. That's what happened. It scared him clean out of his shoes."

The lieutenant stoked up his pipe and continued. "Here's another funny thing nobody's ever been able to figure out. A man floats face down, a woman with her head thrown back. Seems queer, but it's a fact." He advanced several theories, and I added mine to the list for the fun of it. There appeared to be no plausible answer.

My friend was getting warmed up now. "And here's something else. When a colored man drowns, you'll haul him out within 10 feet of where he went down. You can hunt for a while man 25 to 50 feet away. But that's easy to account for. A colored man never struggles. A white man struggles to the finish. That's been proved time and again. 'Another thing we have to watch for is a fake drowning, or suicide. These birds have it all planned and the stage set."

"For goodness sake, why?"

"Money," the lieutenant said grimly. "Insurance money, if they put it across. But they don't. We get 'em. It's purely a matter of elimination and deduction. We question the family. If the person has had no blighted love affairs, no heavy money losses, no sickness and no worries, we know he isn't a suicide. Then we get to work."

"We brought one young man back from Florida, as much alive as you or me. A deliberate frame-up. Circumstantial evidence, you know. A rented bathing suit and a canoe bottom up in the rapids near Great Falls. Water-tight case, they thought. Whole family in on it. And were they sore! They were figurin' to cash in on a several thousand dollar life insurance policy."

"Want to see our equipment?" my host asked.

I assented, and was introduced to the boat house. It contained a number of snappy-looking motor launches, used principally for official business; a number of small motor boats, and a boteaux. The latter, equipped with a trail, is used in dragging for bodies.

"A trail?" I gingerly view the strange-looking object made for such a gruesome purpose. I couldn't resist asking why the name, trail, but didn't succeed in getting a satisfactory answer.

The gadget was a huge coil of rope, which ended in something faintly resembling a rake. The business end of the rope was fastened into a large ball. Attached to this were three iron rods 12 to 18 inches long, each rod containing a lead weight. Dropped from each weight was a short rope ending in three snag hooks. It was a wicked-looking affair, and, according to the lieutenant, very effective. These implements are used exclusively in the search for the missing.

Presently I took my leave, thanking my friend for his hospitality. And although his last words were, "We never fail," I carried away a sneaking hope that the Harbor Police would never have the opportunity to try out their technique on me.

Still it's a comfort to know that, like the Royal Mounted, they always get their man . . . or is it? IVY LINDSEY.

Fair Enough

Mrs. Roosevelt's Tattle

FROM WRITING superficial tattle about the many activities of an amazingly energetic woman, Mrs. Roosevelt of late has turned to occasional bluffs of opinion on political matters. This is not to be wondered at. The wonder—indeed, one of the marvels of journalism in this period—is that she was able to restrain herself so long and that she does not throw off all restraint now, for she is a person with strong opinions.

Communists Boast Congress Influence

THAT THIS organization is an element of the communistic united front in this country has been openly charged by anti-Communist and Fascist groups and individuals. Communists have resented this charge when it was made as a charge by anti-Communist, but in unguarded moments have themselves boasted of their activity and influence in the congress. There is much evidence from the Communists themselves that they have used the congress as a blind, but they angrily resent citations from their own documents.

Mrs. Roosevelt has been pitching her line to the Trotsky horse just as Mr. Ickes has pitched his to others, and it is not less than fair that those in or of the Administration who consort politically with Communists be held accountable. It is their privilege to do this, and if this administration or a successor were to display an equally warm sympathy for the anti-American Nazi band that would be legal, too.

Administration Encourages Reds

THIS POINT IS, however, that individuals and the Administration which they represent are responsible for their expressions and actions of sympathy for Communists and cannot be permitted to pretend that their interest is noncommittal. The Communists boast that they poll a negligible vote in this country, but they are receiving vastly more sympathy and encouragement from this Administration than those genuine Americans who poll a vastly larger vote and constitute the other major political party, the Republicans.

Although the Youth Congress in an embarrassing political jam, was forced to disavow dictatorship under any banner, including the Red one, it did not condemn communism itself, and, for the sake of the record, cherished democracy. But the new party line has taken over the word "democracy" and adopted as ancestors of communists many venerable grandfathers of democracy. Those whom Mrs. Roosevelt, Ickes and the Administration generally find congenial for, however, to review the character of Communism in Russia.

Ruthless Dictator Also Rules Soviet

THAT EVASION is too glaring to be overlooked, for in Russia communism is a dictatorship of one man as ruthless, bloodthirsty and scornful of the rights of minorities as Hitler himself. Russia has not recently threatened the peace of other countries because she failed in her great foray in that direction and since then has wisely decided to protect, develop and, if possible, consolidate what she has. That is the only reason why Russia under the Communist dictator does not attempt to overthrow other countries as Hitler and Mussolini have done.

In Russia, as in the axis nations, the people do not make the laws. Russia forbids freedom of speech and of the press, and political opposition is treason, punishable by death, just as it is in the axis countries. Russia undertook to abolish religion and still attempts to suppress religion, whereas Hitler attempts to control it, and Mussolini settled the problem by conferring a protected religious monopoly.

Hitler and the Duce permit nominal private ownership of property, but it is only nominal, and this is the favorite—indeed, the only—difference which the Communists try to exploit here. It is a fake difference, however, as many informed writers have shown. This is a brief high-spot reminder of the system which was advocated for this country by those whom Mrs. Roosevelt, Ickes and the New Deal as a whole find politically congenial.

Senate Broadens Security Act

Eligibles for Old-Age Benefits Doubled at $695,000,000 in Cost

The Senate yesterday agreed to liberalizing changes in the social security act, virtually doubling the number of aged persons eligible for old-age insurance benefits in 1940, estimated to cost an additional $695,000,000 in the next 15 years.

The Finance Committee proposal, lowering eligibility requirements to permit at least 150,000 more aged persons to qualify for the benefits, was adopted by a 59-19 roll call vote after a brisk round of debate on the added cost.

Another liberalizing change that would increase Federal contributions to the States for old-age assistance grants, to cost about $80,000,000 more annually, was independently offered by Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, and may come to a vote today.

Defeated, 12 to 6, in the Finance Committee, the Connally amendment drew the support of Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, on the floor. Senate Majority Leader Barkley indicated he would vote for it.

The Connally plan would require the Federal Government to put up $2 for every $1 supplied by the States on the first $15 toward old-age assistance. Remaining funds, up to $40, would be on a 50-50 matching basis with the States.

The House previously had raised the Federal contribution from $15 to $20 on a strictly matching basis, and the Senate had ratified this action. Connally and Byrnes contended the poorer States could never supply the first $15, much less $20, to be matched by the Government, and asked that the Government supply two-thirds of any part of the first $15 put up by the States.

Senate Speeds Action
Senator Byrnes, who unsuccessfully had offered in committee a "variable formula" proportioning the State's contribution according to the ratio its per capita income bears to the national average, had withdrawn his amendment in favor of the Connally plan, which he said "has greater support."

The Senate sped quickly through committee amendments without any reversals, approving:

"Freeing" of the old-age insurance tax at 1 per cent on the worker and 1 per cent on the employer for the next three years, at a three-year tax saving to workers and employers of $625,000,000.

Old age insurance coverage for 1,100,000 additional persons—seamen, bank employees, and employed persons 65 or over.

Material Aid Grant Raised
A $2,020,000 increase in Federal grants to States for maternal and child health services; a $1,628,000 increase for Federal grants for crippled children; a $4,600,000 increase in Federal grants for public health work; and a $2,022,000 increase in grants for vocational rehabilitation.

The primary liberalizing change approved by the Senate will permit the earnings of persons 65 and over to be counted for both benefit and tax purposes beginning January 1, 1939. Under present law, if a person reaches 65 without having met the eligibility requirements, it is impossible for him ever to qualify for a monthly benefit by earnings after reaching 65. Under the Senate change, such a person can now qualify by earnings received after 65 in insured employment.

The Senate lowered eligibility requirements by counting "fully insured" persons who had earned at least $50 in each of one-half of the calendar quarters elapsing since December 31, 1937. Thus with a minimum of six quarters in which $50 was earned, to his credit, an individual would be eligible for benefits or retirement at 65. The House bill computed credits on an annual basis, with a total of $600 earnings required. The committee said the change to a $50 quarterly basis would permit "some very low paid and intermittently employed workers to qualify."

ization legislation, planned to leave for Chicago on business today. Another meeting of the Kennedy subcommittee, with the Commissioner attending, was scheduled for next Monday afternoon.

Senator King (Democrat), Utah, introduced a companion bill in the Senate yesterday but indicated he would not push it unless the House acts first.

Further obstacles were thrown in the way of the municipal reform legislation when four city agencies at the District Building submitted adverse reports to the Commissioners, and the Central Labor Union registered objection to the handling of the labor problem.

Objections Raised
The Public Utilities Commission objected to the set-up of the department of public utilities on the ground that the present secretary would become director and administrative head of the department.

Jo V. Morgan, sole member of the Board of Tax Appeals, protested against the abolition of the board and his placement on the proposed revenue board, and the recorder of deeds objected to being absorbed by the revenue department.

Frank R. Jelliff, chairman of the Parole Board, sent word from Massachusetts that he opposed the placing of the Parole Board in the Welfare Department.

Labor Backs Schulte
The Central Labor Union delegation, headed by John Locher, called on Commissioner Allen and suggested that the Schulte bill to establish a labor department be substituted for the industrial relations department proposal.

The union objected particularly, its spokesmen said, to the appointment of the department head by the city manager or District administrator.

Meeting at federation headquarters under the chairmanship of William J. La Rue, Jr., former chairman of the D. C. Parole Board, the group agreed to draft a letter to the Commissioners, in which it will be pointed out that most States finance a chaplain, and that prisoners' spiritual as well as material needs should be provided by society.

Local Catholics already have employed a chaplain of their faith, but at present the Washington Federation of Churches has been unable to pay the salary of a Protestant chaplain, which would be $1,800 annually. Baptist, Christian Science, Episcopal and Lutheran groups sponsor prison services.

McNutt Faces A Real Test

By Ernest K. Lindley

Important Post

THIS COLUMN is written on the assumption that Paul V. McNutt will be the Federal security administrator—which I hinted was a possibility in the column preceding this one.

The job is one of the six or seven most important in the Federal Administration. In importance it is matched or exceeded only by three or four Cabinet posts—State, Treasury, Agriculture and, possibly, Labor—and by the new post of Federal Works administrator. The new office of Federal security administrator might be added, but it is occupied by Jesse Jones, whose measure, vertically and horizontally, has been taken.

Of the occupants of those other posts, only two count for much in the political stream flowing toward the 1940 election. They are Henry Wallace, Secretary of Agriculture, and Cordell Hull, Secretary of State. Harry L. Hopkins, who was given the chance to make a run for the nomination by his appointment as Secretary of Commerce, has not been able to recover his health. His advice carries great weight with the President, but he must be counted out of the 1940 Presidential race.

Paul McNutt is a declared candidate for the Presidential nomination. He is sure of his delegation from his native State of Indiana. Probably he will have a few delegates from other States, and he is reasonably sure of being the second, third, or fourth choice of electors in the electoral college.

His appointment as Federal security administrator by President Roosevelt would therefore become a political event of high importance.

Four Or Five Held Eligible For Job

THE IMPORTANCE is heightened by the fact that the President could have chosen any one of four or five other people who were eminently fitted. The persons in the group are: the Secretary of the Treasury in charge of Public Health, Mr. business affairs, which compelled her to retire from public life temporarily. The person in the group who is most likely to be chosen is Miss Josephine Roche, of Colorado, former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury in charge of Public Health. Her business affairs, which compelled her to retire from public life temporarily.

As alternatives there were several able men: Arthur Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board; Oscar Chapman, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury; and Parran, Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service; Clarence Dykstra, president of the University of Wisconsin; and Aubrey Williams, National Youth administrator. But none of them could be regarded as raw material for the Democratic Presidential nomination in 1940.

McNutt is Presidential material. More than three months ago I wrote "Having known him since followed his career for more than 25 years, I assert with conviction that he has been badly underestimated by most politicians of my acquaintance in Washington. In native ability he belongs in the top 10 or 15 men in national politics today. He has a first-rate mind and immense energy."

Security Post Offers Big Test

McNUTT'S APPOINTMENT to an important job in Washington could not be interpreted to mean that he has been chosen as Roosevelt's heir. Its minimum meaning is that the President, taking advantage of McNutt's declaration that he will not be a candidate if Roosevelt wants a third term, wants to "lie him in" to the New Deal—make sure that the McNutt delegates will be within Roosevelt's sphere of influence. Its maximum meaning is that Roosevelt looks upon McNutt as a possible heir and wants to look him over at close range and try him out in a difficult job before making up his mind about McNutt's qualifications.

I am inclined to put the maximum meaning on the appointment, if it comes through. The post of Federal security administrator will demand first-rate administrative ability. But, more than that, it is a vital policy-making position. Out of this sector will come a large part of the domestic program of the Democratic Party for 1940. The man who holds this post has a unique chance to fuse social idealism and an economic program for the next several years. It is a severe test, which can break an ambitious man, or carry him to the head of the list of Presidential candidates.

Representative Woodruff, of Virginia, acting chairman of the House subcommittee handling relief, said yesterday that "we discussed the matter informally and I may say that the committee was pleased with the vigorous stand which Col. Harrington has taken, and it is watching the situation with a great deal of interest."

Even if the prevailing wage is restored in the Senate, observers consider it has little chance in the House, which inserted the 120-hour provision in the bill at the suggestion of Col. Harrington, with a notable absence of protests from organized labor.

In Washington, Assistant District WPA Administrator Ross Hawthorn said that 12 of 49 strikers had returned to work. "A good part" of the remainder have been dropped, he said, because of absence from their job for five days.

Col. Somervell, in New York, said strikers for five-day absence would begin today.

An emergency meeting of the executive committee of the United States conference of mayors was called for Friday by its president, Mayor F. H. LaGuardia of New York, in an effort to work out a solution to the problem brought about by WPA strikers. A. F. L. leaders will meet here today to map a plan of action.

Mexico And Silver

By Betty Kirk

Cardenas Faces His Severest Test

MEXICO City. The silver crisis caught the Nation completely off guard, stunning government officials, financiers and mining operators with the suddenness and severity of its shock. Yet in the brief time since the blow was struck a degree of composure has been restored and a political philosophy, in conformity with the entire Cardenas program, has been established to meet the critical situation.

The situation is critical no one denies. It presents the severest test with which the Cardenas administration has been faced and it comes at a time when the internal political pot is seething with restlessness, rooted in the presidential succession. The political effects of the shock may prove in the end to be much more drastic and important than the economic effects, though the two are inevitably linked.

First consideration in any understanding of Mexico is the weakness—one might even say futility—of an economic yardstick for measuring national affairs and public reactions. Money has never yet been a primary factor in the life of a people who have a benevolent climate, simple desires naturally satisfied, and an oriental passivity when faced with conditions which would be disastrous to the industrialized and highly keyed populations of the north. The Mexican still lives close to the soil and from it derives the capacity for absorbing shock, which capacity has been lost to the skyscraper civilizations.

It is upon this capacity that President Cardenas has relied while putting into effect his aggressive reforms. It is on this capacity that he is again relying, but whether it can stand up under both external and internal pressure is a question which remains to be answered. If it does not the United States, as well as Mexico, will be presented with a vital political problem.

THE SILVER crisis came at a time when the national economy was showing many signs of recovery from the effects of the governmental reforms and of the oil expropriation. Agriculture and cattle production were the best in several years and it is expected that Mexico will be able to feed herself this year, after several years of heavy food imports. Business transactions and bank deposits were increasing and the government income reveals a steady monthly rise since the first of the year. All oil produced from the expropriated foreign properties is being sold, both abroad and in an improved domestic market. Reserves in the government bank of Mexico had increased by 12,000,000 pesos since last September, despite the flight of capital from the country after the oil expropriation.

The country was, accordingly, in a better position to withstand the shock than it was at the time of the oil expropriation, when both economically and agriculturally conditions were depressed. That the present crisis is much graver is indicated by employment figures for the two industries, for while oil gave work to 16,000 men located mainly in three states, mining employs 100,000 heads of families distributed throughout the republic.

MEXICO is the greatest silver-producing country in the world, and mining is its basic industry. Before the oil expropriation mining paid 10 per cent of all government revenues, and since the oil revenues have been eliminated the proportion has increased. Mining pays 17 per cent of the total gross revenues of the National Railways, and during the past year silver sales to the United States Government provided the major source of foreign exchange for the Mexican treasury. Forty per cent of all exports were metals.

Any blow at the mining industry hits at the very heart of the national economy, as such figures prove. It also strikes at profitable American interests here and at United States trade, sustained in a large part by Mexican government purchases, made possible by the silver sales. For agricultural machinery alone the Cardenas government spent $100,000,000 (dollars) between 1934 and 1937 in the United States.

EIGHTY per cent of the Mexican mining industry is owned by United States capital and in 1937 the industry spent $30,000,000 in the United States for new equipment. In 1937 Mexico ranked as the fourth best United States export market, and in 1938, despite the growth of barter deals, 70 per cent of all imports here were from the United States. The silver crisis, accordingly, is a double-edged sword, cutting deep into the stability both of the Mexican economy and the United States export market and foreign investments.

First action taken here to meet the situation was the withdrawal

John Bull—Who is that big fellow over there hogging our fire-place?

France—That's Russia. He's joined our group, you know.

John Bull—So he has! I almost forgot. He's not very chummy.

France—He probably feels as strange as we do.

John Bull—I suppose I should do something to make him feel at home. I'll call him over. How do I address him?

France—Just call him "brother."

John Bull (wincing)—It's going to hurt awfully, but I suppose I must. I say there, brother!

(Russia does not answer.)

France—He doesn't seem to respond to the word.

John Bull (relieved)—Good! Then won't he have to stand for him calling me brother either. I'll try calling him "comrade." Hello there, comrade!

Russia—Greeting and coming over warmly—Ah! I thought I was alone.

John Bull (to himself)—I wish you weren't mistaken.

Russia—Think of it! All three of us under the same roof, just as I said we would be some day.

John Bull—Must you rub it in?

Russia—Three comrades, all for one and one for all. I admit it surprises me a little.

France—If it surprises you, imagine what it does to us!

John Bull—Now really...

France—Hush! We'd better take it if it kills us.

Russia—Nonsense! We've got to have unity. Suppose I shake you up an Axis Wallow.

John Bull—What's that?

Russia—We each pour our national drink into one shaker and make a cocktail.

John Bull (warily)—What will it do to us?

Russia—You'll find out!

(Russia shakes up the drink and passes it around.)

John Bull (choking on it)—It burns all the way down.

France—It's liquid fire!

Russia—It's delicious. And very mild! You boys just can't take it.

John Bull (mournfully)—I have a feeling we'll have to.

Russia—Taking another swig!—Well, let's start fighting. Where is he?

John Bull—Who?

Russia—Anybody. I'm not particular. I'll fight anybody as long as I know I can depend on you boys.

France (anxiously)—Don't get this wrong. We'll fight anybody as long as we know we can depend on you!

Russia (taking another drink and doing a Russian dance on a table—C'mon, let's put some pep into this party. It's too damned formal and stiff.)

John Bull (to France)—I suppose we might as well humor him, but I hate that kind of a dance.

Russia (abruptly)—Comrades, you will have to excuse me a little while. I just remembered I have a few things to do. A couple of purges, some mass executions and some propaganda programs. You don't mind letting me go?

John Bull—Not at all.

Russia (in the doorway)—I'll be right back.

John Bull and France (collapsing)—Heaven forbid!

'They All Come Out' Is Tribute to Justice Dept.

Combines High Excitement and Rehabilitation;
A Little More About One Jimmie Stewart;
The Roadside Puts on a Song—and How!

COMBINING ALL of the thrills and excitement of gangsterism, bank robberies, interstate bandit pursuits and vicious gun battles with the corrective processes that are brought to bear upon the lives of the offenders against the law, once they are behind prison bars—and that is where most of them eventually land—"They All Come Out" takes a unique place among current film releases. Made with the co-operation of the United States Department of Justice and its Federal Bureau of Prisons, this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer subject emphasizes the work of rehabilitation that is constantly being pursued in the country's penal institutions. The prison scenes are said to be actual, even down to the views on "The Rock" at Alcatraz. They seemed to be at yesterday's preview.

The story has been cleverly contrived. It is initiated by a conversation between former Attorney General Homer S. Cummings and James V. Bennett, director of the Federal Bureau of Prisons, in which the view is expressed that the remedial work done behind the stone walls is too little known. To demonstrate precisely what goes on, they choose the case of the "Reno" Madigan gang.

Clyde "Reno" Madigan is a pretty tough egg—or should it be yegg? He has his tight little band of hoodlums, including a girl and, shortly after the story gets under way, one Joe Cameron, a young man of decent instincts, who is merely down on his luck and hungry. Stories of vast sums of "easy money" make him an easy victim to the gang's blandishments. Besides that, he is an expert at the wheel of a car. So out they go to crack a few crims, as well as the best "mobs." They crack so many so successfully that the "FBI" boys, as well as the local gendarmes, are soon at their heels. Since they are working in the South, the Atlanta Penitentiary is their next stop.

From this point on, the story divides itself into two interests—the first centers in the boy and girl, who, resentful at first, finally comprehend the value of what is being done for them by the authorities; the second, in "Reno," an old jailbird, who rebels at every turn, plans jailbreaks and in time succeeds in graduating to "The Rock."

Is First of Its Kind

There is sustained tension and high entertainment—strictly on the side of melodrama—in every ramification of the plot. For once, a mild dash of propaganda does not diminish the dramatic forcefulness of the film. Perhaps the only one instance in the sort of role one instinctively associates with Claire Trevor—Tom Neal and Bernard Nedell. All do their chores exceedingly well. Mr. Nedell, especially, deserves credit for a high-pressure performance as one of the most ominous thugs we have met recently.

The "tag-line" of the picture is spoken by former Attorney General Cummings, who says, in effect, "So that is what we are trying to do, help these people, because in time, they 'All Come Out.'" Now is the title clear?

What we said in the paragraph of yesterday's review that had to be snipped off for lack of space was that the overwhelming hit of the Roadside production of "The Fatal Brand," which opened a two-week run Monday night, is the entrancing number, "Cast Aside," sung by Betty Gray, Natalie Cole, Theodore Tiller, Jr. and Milton Friedman. This may not be quite as good as the quartet from "Rigoletto," but it comes close, what with the gestures and all!

So it seems to be about time we got around to saying something concerning the present condition of servitude of James Stewart, one of the better of the screen's young actors.

Mr. Stewart dropped out of the sky late Sunday evening and immediately was pounced upon by that high-strung, Southern gentleman, Sam Galanter, Eastern division manager for Columbia Pictures—Mr. Stewart is currently working in a Columbia picture—and a few members of the press. Mr. Stewart, in a moment of inadvertence, permitted

11 P. M.: Joe Jacobs, Tony Galento's manager, will be married within a few days—as a result of his fight at the Stork Club, a sports official reveals at the Cotton Club. "The newspaper photos of that fight showed Joe with another girl. His true love, Connie Drake, was displeased at this—and so Joe and Connie will be married and will honeymoon at Niagara Falls." "I spoke to Edward Benes, who's sailing for Europe on the 12th," a reporter informs at Sardi's. "He doesn't expect to return to America because he feels that war will break out in Europe, and when it does he'll declare the Czechoslovakian Republic reconstituted."

12 P. M.: "Marquis Childs will collaborate with Clare Boothe on a play," a producer reports at the Paradise. "It will deal with fascism and will be set in a mythical European country." "Fred Storm, the veteran U. P. correspondent at the White House, will quit his job shortly," a Washington executive declares at Colbert's. "Jimmy Roosevelt is hiring him to take over the Goldwyn publicity setup." "So Harry Richmond took me up in his plane, from Miami to Palm Beach," Joe Schenck tells Constance Bennett at the Inland Casino. "I never had flown a plane before—but Harry made me take the controls and showed me how easy it is to fly."

1 A. M.: "John Montague, the mystery man golfer, played at the Bay-side links with the pro on Saturday," an observer states at Moore's. "He shot the first nine holes in 31—and the score included one ball out-of-bounds." "As if things weren't tough enough," the proprietor of a U. S. 52nd St. cafe laments, "my cashier just disappeared with two days' receipts—$1,500." "Jeff Dickson, the European sports promoter who married Billy Mastbaum this week-end, helped 24 Spaniards get into France," Joe Lewis relates at the Riviera. "Although their weights ranged from 108 to 265 pounds, and their ages from 18 to 55, Dickson got them across the border by exhibiting signed contracts for each one of them to appear in Paris to fight Dickson's fighter, Marcel Thiel."

2 A. M.: "Pay no attention to those fights you read about between ball players," Harry Danning assures at the Tavern. "They seldom throw punches—because one broken hand might mean the finish of the career." "The new production of 'Sol. Gen. "Downey asked Jimmy about their Majesties, and Jimmy said: 'We like him very much over there, but Elizabeth isn't popular. She puts on airs. She thinks she's somebody!'"

"I have no backers interested in my new Scandals," George White asserts at the Stork Club. "Just as in all my shows, I put up all the money myself." "J. Burgi Conner & Roman Rebus, who produced 'Green Eyes' are all set to start shooting on a new Yiddish movie," a film producer informs at Leon & Eddie's. "but they have no leading lady. They're looking for one with some film experience."

5 A. M.: "I had a long talk with Dr. Juan Negrin, ex-premier of Spain, while he was here last week," an editor reports at the Famous Door. "He said that Britain was sending 62 planes to Paris, and said: 'If he had been willing to sell us, for cash, half that many planes in 1936, they wouldn't have to be doing this today.'"

6 A. M.: "... and this is a fine time to tell me that you bought all those Wall St. stocks last year... Which ones?... They're terrible stocks... You don't know it, dear—but you're in the wallpaper business."

"Pomander Walk" at the Sylvan

With Hedda Hopper

A perfumed and delicate impression of eighteenth century life was last evening's "Pomander Walk" at the Sylvan Theater. The Louis N. Parker play of almost three decades ago was performed by the Eckington-Roosevelt Players before an audience of nearly 4,000.

This fragile picture of life in a row of houses, along a quiet crescent, is a through-the-looking-glass "Tortilla Flat." It is as romantic as the John Steinbeck novel is realistic, but it is concerned with a group of people living in close proximity, all concerned with each other's business.

There is the retired admiral, the English widow, whose foreign marriage gave her a French name; the busy-body husband, with the invalid wife; the proud father, match-making for a promising son; the spinster, with her parrot; and the pretty girl in love.

When one says that the most outstanding feature of last evening's performance was the remarkable setting, he does not refer to the unequal locale of the Sylvan. That was as unsurpassed as usual. But the setting which did create the memorably charming highlight of the evening, as well as the mood of the play, was Harold Snyder's stage set. Far more ambitious than the general Sylvan stage setting, this represented Pomander Walk itself, a crescent-shaped row of houses in the English style, red brick with flower boxes and climbing vines and neat picket fences in front of each house. Altogether, that setting was a fine triumph for the backstage corps. Mr. Snyder in particular.

Before this setting and even from the second-story windows facing the walk, the Eckington-Roosevelt group told the story of a sailor's love for the daughter of the woman his father had wooed and jilted. Mary C. Sanders was the young French girl; her accent was lilting and her shyness delicately pointed. W. Raymond Wannall was the youthful lieutenant whose father wanted him to marry wealth, not

The Mayor of Studio City Does a Column

'Woo-Woo' Herbert
Breaks Down and Writes Some Sense

By Hugh Herbert.

Written for United Press.

Studio City, Calif., July 11.—Dear Fred Othman: I want you to know I am very happy to take a crack at writing your column—and so I am the mayor of Studio City situated in the beautiful San Fernando Valley between the Santa Monica Mountains and the San Gabriel Mountains, a green fertile valley actually recovered by man. A long time ago, it was a vast desert with sand and gravel, which must have at one time been the bottom of the sea. Now, it is covered with farms and alfalfa ranches, getting as much as four crops a year, some as high as 6 feet, also large orange and lemon groves.

Well enough of that—you'll think I'm in the real estate business and I'm trying to sell you something. I'm not in that business, but besides being mayor, I am president of the Chamber of Commerce, a member of the advisory board of the Studio City Bank, member of Rotary, an honorary editor of the Studio City News, a little paper, which less than two years ago had a circulation of 500. We now boast of over 20,000, believe it or not. I write a column for it weekly, incidentally, I do a little movie work on the side, at present for Walter Wanger Studio in "Eternally Yours."

A Sample Column

Here's a sample of type of column I write:

I've often wondered, when medals and testimonials are given out, why the fellow who thought of the white line, which has the lumber and building material and oils. These trucks are a menace to safety, often are about 40 feet in length and hard to pass. And, besides, they are run by one man and if a law could be passed stopping them, it would give work to a hundred thousand men.

I suppose you have heard, like everyone else, about the "wild" parties in Hollywood. I have been here 12 years and have attended hundreds of parties—so-called "wild parties"—and I must admit I have yet to see anything "wild" about them. They are, if anything, more childish than most kid parties.

Stars' Simple Pleasures

Just because a person becomes a star, does not change his nature, especially when it comes to having fun. I've seen the biggest of them all, the big boys, having a genuine time with table tennis, bowling on the green—even pitching horseshoes, or pennies.

Jimmie Gleason and Lucille, his wife, have parties at which about two or three hundred guests are plenty to drink. Here everyone has all kinds of simple fun and a swell time.

I have a lot of peculiar experiences in my spot in this life. I have a chance to meet all kinds of people and many people ask my poor wife if I am really cuckoo around the house and if I run around clapping my hands and saying "woo-woo." "Heaven forbid," she always says (I hope).

Was waiting for my car to get me, out at Universal Studio the other day. A woman walked past me and looked at me rather queerly. Then she came back and took another look. Finally she walked up to me and said, "Fardon me, but are you Hugh Herbert?" And I said, "Yes. She looked at me again and said, "Oh, my God—"

Close-Ups and Long-Shots
Of the Motion Picture Scene

By International News Service.

Hollywood, July 11.—A far cry from the earthiness of "February Hill" to the delicate fantasy of "The Enchanted Cottage." Yet, Pandro Berman will produce both of them, with Ginger Rogers as the star. Pandro's method of trying to keep Ginger from being typecast as a dancer. "The Enchanted Cottage," made as long ago as 1923 by the old Inspiration Pictures, starred May McAvoy and Richard Barthelmess and it was considered a great movie triumph in its day.

I am surprised that it hasn't reached the talkie stage yet, but I am told, it was tied up in the estate of the author, Sir Arthur Wing Pinero, and it was only last week that Pandro succeeded in buying the rights. The price paid was in the neighborhood of $25,000, and that isn't too much in this day and age, when the dearth of worthwhile screen vehicles is adding gray hairs to producers' heads.

Director William Keighley, who, with his bride, Genevieve Tobin, has toured the Orient and Europe for three and a half months, returned today with a wealth of information. Most interesting of all is his belief that India is a valuable picture market and that China will eventually be the big market. He says the bombing of Chinese cities by the Japanese did more to solidify the nation than even the efforts of their generals. In Singapore, "Yes, My Darling Daughter" was the hit, and Keighley says Genevieve were guests of honor. The first motion picture people to visit China since the outbreak of the war, they were given a royal welcome. China, at this time, has no money, but Keighley believes it will be a future film market, well worth cultivating. Errol Flynn, in costume, is the most popular actor in the Far East. Shots were taken in Malaya for research on "The White Rajah," which Keighley may do later with Errol.

The most unhappy man in Hollywood for a few days was Basil Rathbone, who wanted to play the Chief of Justice in "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" more than he ever wanted to play any part. He said he had never signed any contract with Universal, but that he had promised to do "Rio," providing the script was satisfactory. Universal had already sold the picture with Rathbone and Sigrid Gurie to the exhibitors and if Basil had stepped out, it would have meant a terrific loss. Cliff Work, who is a diplomat, appealed to Rathbone on his basis, never mentioning a lawsuit. So, rather than put the film company in the middle, he agreed to forget the RKO offer. That's why Sir Cedric Hardwicke was put into Rathbone's role.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Allan Jones may go to court to seek possession of his son by his first marriage for the two months permit; Constance Bennett sails on the Normandie for Paris tomorrow to obtain her divorce from the Marquis de La Fayette. When she returns she will wed Gilbert Roland. Broderick Crawford, devoted to Rita Johnson for so many months, is now concentrating on pretty Lucille La Sert, a newswoman from the movies. Frank Parker is back from New York and not married to Mitz Green, as was rumored; Stewart Schulberg, son of Ben and Mrs. Ad. Schulberg, played today, all grown up, after a year at school at Geneva. Lili Damita celebrated her birthday in Coronado with Errol Flynn, his family, Geraldine and Johnnie Myers; who was Olivia De Havilland's escort at the Coconut Grove Saturday night? Lots of parties there, with Louis B. Mayer hosting eight, Alvin Karpis, four, and Jackie Cooper with a very, very pretty girl.

Jane Wyman certainly made an entrance at Slapsy Maxie's when Ronald Reagan carried her in. A sprained ankle was the explanation; Doris Nolan and Gregory La Cava, with eyes only for each other, glimpsed at the Cafe La Maza; Mae Sunday hosted a dinner for Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon and introduced the champions of jitterbug dancing. Never saw anything like these kids, who have been the attraction at Marcel's; Queenie Smith and Edward Stevenson, the RKO style specialist, glimpsed at the RKO. Rochelle Hudson is said to be considering matrimony with a young film man, as soon as he is legally free; the Betty Warner-Milton Sperling wedding reception at the RKO last night; Sally Eilers saves this week for three months of stock in Connecticut. She will be joined by Harry Joe Brown in the fall and, together, they will visit South America. That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Your Figure Madame!

By Ida Jean Kain.

It's Time to Watch Diet if Your Dress Size Goes Up

GOING from a size 18 to a 20 is almost more than a woman can bear. You don't mind too much when you inadvertently pick up a few pounds and have to let out a seam here and a tuck there. But there is something irrevocable about changing to a whole size larger dress.

"Why," you protest to the salesgirl, "this is ridiculous! I've never worn anything larger than an 18—I could really wear a 16! I can't have gained that much! These sizes must be marked wrong!"

And if the salesgirl is tactful she will promptly agree with you. She may even infer that, due to the changes in styles, what used to be an 18 is now a 20, but that you needn't worry, because you have a very nice figure.

May Not Be Found

One reason you are apt to be so outraged over this graduation to a larger size is that you may not actually have gained enough weight to justify the increase in dimensions. But your figure can change without the addition of any weight, and it does when you fail to take any exercise—a temptation in the summer. First you get soft, then you spread, and there you are!

To be on the safe and savvy side, keep a bimonthly record of your measurements. When you see your measurements right down there in black and white, you won't let yourself get any larger. You may find yourself seriously interested in getting your figure down a bit.

Your pivotal measurements are the waist, bust and hips. But measurements, like weight, depend a great deal on your structure and the chest circumference is the key to that—take it first, passing the tape around under the arms and above the bust. The bust measurement is taken by circling the tape around the back and across the center of the breasts. The difference between these two measurements is usually less in the stocky figure with the wide rib cage than in the slender figure with a narrow rib cage. The main factor in a beautiful contour is a musculature strong enough to hold the bust in a firm, high position. For the record, however, the bust may measure from 1 to 3 inches more than the chest and be lovely.

Waist Should Be Less

The waist should be from 7 to 10 inches smaller than the bust circumference. Eight inches less is perfect for the short girl, and 9 inches less an ideal for the tall girl. The hips may exceed the bust by 1 to 3 inches.

Favorite recipes of leading home economists of Washington will be featured daily in the Home Editor.

ELINOR LEE, food guest editor today, gives her favorite recipe to Post readers. As director of home economics, Station WJWS, Columbia Broadcasting System, Mrs. Lee is known to many through her homemakers' programs. A native of West Virginia, she was graduated in home economics from Beaver College, Jenkintown, Pa. She organized the home economics department in the high school of Shepherdstown, W. Va. Later she studied dietetics at the Church, Home and Infirmary Hospital, Baltimore, and served as a dietitian in that institution. She was also former home economist for the Potomac Light & Power Co., Martinsburg, W. Va.; the Virginia Public Service Co., Alexandria, and the Washington Electric and Manufacturing Co., coming to WJWS almost two years ago. She is on the program committee of the Soroptimist Club and Home Economics Women in Business.

When asked for her favorite recipe, Mrs. Lee said, "I am very fond of any and all good food. To decide just what is my favorite recipe is a problem. However, I feel that nothing is so indispensable to every meal as bread and nothing so tempting as hot rolls. I keep dough for rolls in my refrigerator constantly so as to have them whenever I want them, which is at least once a day.

Here is Mrs. Lee's recipe:

Raised Rolls
Combine 1 cup scalded milk, 1

cup boiling water, 4 tablespoons sugar, 1 tablespoon salt and 4 tablespoons butter and cool until lukewarm. Dissolve 2 yeast cakes in 2 tablespoons lukewarm water and add 1 teaspoon sugar. Stir into first mixture when it is lukewarm. Add 2 well-beaten eggs and blend well. Add 4 cups flour and beat well. If using a mixer, beat 3 minutes at medium speed. Add 3 more cups of flour and beat at high speed until well blended. Add remaining flour and stir in with a spoon. The dough is then ready to make into rolls, or store in refrigerator for use later. To make into rolls, place dough on floured board, knead until elastic and easily handled, shape into rolls and let rise in a warm place (80 degrees) until double in bulk. Bake in hot oven, 425 degrees, 12 to 15 minutes. This is the quick method. For rolls with finer texture, the dough should be allowed to rise in the bowl until double in bulk. Then knead thoroughly again to break up carbon dioxide, and to distribute the gas. Next shape into rolls and let rise to double in bulk, when they are ready to be baked.

Refrigerator Rolls
Place dough in a greased bowl; brush surface with melted butter; cover tightly and store in refrigerator. The dough will keep several days and may be kept a week if constant temperature between 45 and 50 degrees is maintained. It may also be used as a foundation for many varieties of raised breads such as: Pecan Rolls, Coffee Cake, Apple Cake, Cinnamon, Rum, Swedish and Orange Marmalade Buns.

Keep Children Busy, Expert Tells Parents

Miss Erwin Advises Plants and Animals to Interest Youngsters

By Genevieve Reynolds

ACCUSTOMED to the planned activities of kindergarten, grade or nursery schools, children are now on a holiday with plenty of energy for doing things. Yet, they have no set routine. How can mothers keep their tots occupied during the summer?

When this question was put to Miss Doris Erwin, assistant director of the National Child Research Center, she promptly replied, "Teach them about nature; introduce them to the sciences; improve their artistic ability and, if possible, give them a plot of land to plant and to tend."

Miss Erwin knows whereof she speaks, for this plan keeps the tiny ones happily entertained at the nursery school.

"Whenever possible," said Miss Erwin, "keep the children out of doors to play. Point out the various trees, flowers, shrubs. Repeat the names over and over until the child can identify the tree or flower by the bark, leaves, shape or size. Soon the child will discover new leaves or flowers and bring them to you with a multitude of questions. Answer these questions simply and patiently. For this will not only stimulate interest but increase the powers of observation.

Goldfish Helps

"A goldfish in a pond or bowl will provide ample material for a few introductory lessons in science. For example, when the little ones ask why you put weeds in the pond or bowl, you can tell them it makes oxygen which is a form of air necessary for fish to breathe."

The explanation of what makes a shadow is another simplified lesson in science, suggested by Miss Erwin. Shadows interest a child, and they will watch their shadows, she explained. "It could be demonstrated that inanimate objects such as tin wagons, houses and automobiles also make shadows and that they are big or little, depending upon the time of day and the position of the sun in the sky."

"Growing things stimulate interest in even the smallest child. They love to watch the change in different plants from day to day. This interest should be encouraged and not stifled. A worm found while digging in the sand furnishes material for a lesson in zoology. And, although children are cooped up in tiny city apartments, parents can tell them about the sort of growing plant for the child to observe."

Plants Are Listed

Plants suggested by Miss Erwin for indoor cultivation are: Potatoes, carrots, corn kernels or bird seed. A sweet potato placed in a jar of water, she explains, will sprout roots, vines and shoots. And, by sprinkling bird seed on a damp sponge and keeping it moist, a variety of plants such as wheat, oats and numerous weeds will grow on the sponge. These, she said, should be explained to the child.

"If at all possible," she said, "provide the child with a small plot of ground and let him cultivate it. Show him how to plant in rows, hills or sow wheat. Give him a few seeds at a time to drop in the ground. While preparing the soil and planning, explain what grows best in each type of land."

"Of course," she continued, "you must always keep the words simple enough for them to understand. She cautioned against trying to teach very small children the long scientific names of plants and animals. When the children tire of nature or the sciences, give them clay with which to mold various figures. Or give them a small saw, hammer, nails, a board, box or something else to cut and drive nails into, she advised.

Stringing of beads, painting clothes pegs and boxes, or drawing houses, animals, trees or people are other devices for keeping children busy during the hot days which Miss Erwin suggested.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Appalled by Prospect of Empty Years Ahead, Spinster of 60 Asks How to Fill Her Days

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My life has been spent in the care of relatives, near and distant—nieces, nephews, brothers, sisters and aged parents, so that I have never had time to think of or plan for myself. Unfortunately, my nearest relatives have all passed away, so that I find myself, at 60, utterly alone in the world. What am I to do with myself and my empty hands for the remainder of my life?

In all probability, I shall live a long life, as I come of a long-lived family. In addition, I have taken scrupulous care of my health, as an indispensable asset in discharging my responsibilities. So, at 60, I can outlook and outwork many a woman 20 years my junior. The thought of the empty years ahead fills me with panic.

If I had money, I could adopt a child, or children. But I must carefully conserve my small funds, for soon I shall be compelled to retire, on account of age, and the small pittance I shall get as annuity will scarcely suffice for one. Music, lectures and so forth are well enough as diversions, but they don't fill your heart when you come home to an empty apartment.

My friends have families and interests of their own. The remedy of going to see some one worse off than one's self doesn't work, either. I have visited homes for the aged, and the old ladies sitting on the porch, pitifully grateful for a basket of fruit, bring the stalling thought that soon I may be one of them. So that's out.

I am not the intellectual type who might find complete satisfaction in intellectual pursuits. Books and lectures do not take the place of human companionship; of persons to love. I made the mistake of not getting married 20 or even 10 years ago, regardless of responsibilities. But marriage is out of the question now, for no one would wish to marry a woman of 60 without money, even though she be alert and trim.

So, Miss Haworth, I shall be deeply grateful if you can suggest anything to ease this loneliness and give me an interest in life. And if you have no suggestions, just drop this into the wastebasket. LONELY.

A List of Suggestions

DEAR LONELY: It occurs to me that a partial cure for your demoralizing sense of loneliness—which stems from a feeling of not being necessary to anybody's happiness—might be found in sharing your home (as much for pleasure as for profit) with one or two young businesswomen (typists, clerks, stenographers, secretaries or salespersons) on small income; or with college students or students who are working their way through night school courses.

Then, there is the interesting possibility of your finding a place as resident housekeeper for a well-to-do widower with small or half-grown children. This is an idea well worth considering, if you are soon to be retired from the business world on annuity income. With your experience and other credentials, it seems to me you are exceptionally qualified for such a position. Probably the best approach to such a job is through the classified advertising columns of daily newspapers.

Also, there is the thought that you might pool your resources—of health, fixed income, home-making experience, etc.—with another older woman's complementary resources and operate a guest house, in season, at either a summer or winter resort—caterers to a special group, perhaps, as young girls, or young men, or older people, or young married couples with small children.

Or, again, you might contact several of the prominent real estate agencies now constructing large apartment buildings, with the idea of lining up a job as building manager—a job which would keep you busy virtually every waking hour contributing to the comfort of others, and augment your income considerably by supplying an apartment rent-free.

And what of the idea of swapping old horizons for new ones altogether, by embarking—after retirement—on a leisurely trip around the world by freighter? Many women of your age, without dependents and with subsistence income, have done so. Such trips may be planned, with the aid of a reputable travel agency, at almost incredibly small expense. By leasing your apartment furnished—so as to have a

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

Hollywood Is Making Movie on New York's 'Women-Only' Hotel

New York, July 11.

PRETTY SOON we're going to see a movie which will waken memories in the hearts of many a New Yorker, male and female. It's the one about the hotel in which only women live, and in which party-planner Elsa Maxwell appears. She also helped write it.

When this notion was born in the bubbling mind of a Hollywood producer, he sent an ace scenarist named Kathryn Scola to live in just such a place in our town. Kathryn did, met the girls, many of them professional models, and lived their lives for several weeks. Then she wrote her piece, and Elsa was called in as actress and collaborator.

Shucks, that hotel is famous here. It's called the Barbizon and is in midtown Manhattan. Maybe you recall it. It's a fine big secular nunnery, that place—said to see the young men sitting around the lobby waiting for their "dates" at dinnertime is a terrible object lesson in masculine discomfort. The lads all look as though a huge house detective were about to pitch them into the street on the seat of their best ice-cream pants. And the girls are mighty grand to look at, too, most of them. Models, mannequins, and such-like. And there's the upstairs settin' room, too, which is co-educational up to a certain hour.

John Barrymore's local debutante daughter has dropped the family name, Elythe. For the summer in the theater, and sails under the more famous hand, Diana Barrymore.

10 American Women to Curtsy To British King and Queen Today

Wives and Daughters of Embassy Officials At London to Be Presented at Court Of St. James by Ambassador Kennedy

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor

PLANTING THEIR HIGHEST social hopes on three white plumes and a couple of courtesies—one for King George and the other for Queen Elizabeth—ten American women today will make their bows at the Court of St. James.

While the fuss and feathers that go with American presentations to royalty have become less noticeable since Ambassador Joseph Kennedy refused to pass on any applications unless they came from wives of embassy officials, the envoy will have his hands full today. Under his aegis a flock of lovely ladies will step up, bend the knee at just the right time, and have something to talk about the rest of their lives.

If rumors now going the rounds materialize, Ambassador Kennedy may not have to bother with court bows much longer. On every hand these days you hear that he has had enough of the London job, and that Secretary Woodring soon will be appointed to take over the task. Well, that may be just so much tea-table talk, but I can't help thinking Mrs. Woodring would be a pretty picture in a handsome white frock, set off with three white feathers a-top her blonde hair.

Back to today: Every one on the list of ladies to be presented today rates the honor either as a wife or daughter of an embassy official. Heading the line-up is Ambassador Kennedy's own daughter, Eunice, who will follow in the footsteps of her mother and sister to make a curtsy to Their Britannic Majesties.

Miss Marian Kirk on the List

Mrs. Theodore Achilles, wife of the Third Secretary of the Embassy, who left Washington with her husband late last winter, is another who will bow to crowned heads today. Still, others on the list include Mrs. Alan G. Kirk, the former Lydia Chapin, who is wife of the Naval Attaché, and their two daughters, Deborah and Marian, the latter of whom was presented to Washington society at a Thanksgiving tea in 1937 by her grandmother, Mrs. Frederick L. Chapin.

Mrs. Alexander V. Dye, wife of the Commercial Attaché, is another to be presented today; also Mrs. Bradford G. Chynoweth, wife of Lieut. Col. Chynoweth, Military Attaché, and their daughter, Miss Frances Chynoweth; and Mrs. Norman R. Hitchcock, wife of the assistant Naval Attaché, Lieut. Comdr. Hitchcock.

Attending the court with Ambassador and Mrs. Kennedy will be Franklin G. Gowen, second secretary of the embassy, and Mrs. Gowen.

Crews Gathering in New Hampshire

Closer home: One of America's leading diplomatic families will enjoy a reunion the next few weeks at the Hancock, N. H., home of the United States Ambassador to Japan and Mrs. Joseph C. Grew. Latest addition to the house party is Mrs. Cecil B. Lyon, daughter of Ambassador and Mrs. Grew, who arrived yesterday in New York from Santiago, where her husband is third secretary of the United States Embassy. Accompanying her were their two children, Ann and Joseph Grew 2d. Mr. and Mrs. Pierpont Moffat (she is the former Lilla Cabot Grew) joined Ambassador and Mrs. Grew a few days ago at Hancock. Down from Ottawa has come still another Grew daughter, Mrs. Robert English, whose husband is secretary of our legation in Canada.

Many Countries Are Represented

This gathering of the Grews is interesting on many accounts. Four diplomatic households will be represented in that reunion. Each of the three Grew daughters was born in a different country, each married a diplomat, and each—page Ripley!—has two children, each of whom was born in a different country!

Vital statistics: When Ambassador Grew was secretary of the American Embassy in Russia, Lilla Grew, now Mrs. Moffat, was born. Mrs. English Anita Grew first saw the light of day in Berlin when her father was secretary of the embassy there, and Mrs. Lyon, Elizabeth Grew, was born in Vienna.

Now to finish the story—Mr. and Mrs. Moffat have two children, one of whom was born in Switzerland and the other in the United States. Mr. and Mrs. English's daughter, Ann, was born in Paris and Joseph in Canada. Mrs. Lyon's elder daughter, Alice, had Japan as her birthplace, and the other daughter, Lilla, was born in China. Sounds complicated—and it is.

Juan Chavez, Wife Guests of Doherty's

Juan Chavez, Commercial Counselor of the Peruvian Embassy, and Senora Chavez are guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Doherty in their apartment in the towers of the Waldorf-Astoria. Also at the Waldorf now are Mr. and Mrs. William Stanley, of Laurel, Md., who are in New York for several days and will see the World's Fair while there. Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris, who have been in New York since Sunday, are staying at the Waldorf, where they will be until Friday when they are expected to return to their home here at 5242 Colorado avenue.

Couple Goes to New York Whence They Will Sail To Cuba and Panama

Wearing a gown of white imported Chantilly lace, Miss Kathryne Elder Cooksey, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Claude R. Cooksey, of Washington, was married at 6:30 last evening to E. Hewitt Dimmitt, son of Mrs. Roy Dimmitt, also of this city, and the late Mr. Dimmitt. The ceremony took place at the National Baptist Memorial Church, the Rev. Gove Griffith Johnson officiating. Palms, ferns and large baskets of white and yellow gladioli and gypsophylla decorated the church.

Mr. Cooksey gave his daughter in marriage. Her frock was made with a fitted bodice, high neck and short puffed sleeves, and the skirt was formed of ruffles which formed a long train. Her veil fell from a lace cap trimmed with orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of lilies of the valley and white orchids.

Bride Has Three Attendants

Mrs. Edwin F. Grimmelsen, of Springfield, Mass., was matron of honor, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Clarence E. Dammon, of West Lafayette, Ind., sister of the bride; Mrs. Virginia Stephenson, of Washington, and Mrs. Grimmelsen wore citronade marquisette and lace, with brief puffed sleeves, and a small violet off-the-face horsehair hat with a rose and streamer of matching ribbon. Her lace mitts were the same color as her gown, and she carried an arm bouquet of violet larkspur. The bridesmaids were dressed alike in green marquisette and lace, with hats like that of the matron of honor, and they carried bouquets like Mrs. Grimmelsen's.

A supper for the two families and members of the bridal party followed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Cooksey, 3606 Sixteenth street. Mrs. Cooksey wore a gown of gray chiffon with shirred sleeves and a gray hat trimmed with pink and blue flowers. A corsage of pink roses completed her costume. The mother of the bridegroom was in white chiffon, with a shirred hat of crepe, and a corsage of lilies of the valley.

Stanley Roland Is Best Man

Stanley Roland, of Arlington, Va., was best man, and the ushers were William C. Stue, cousin of the bride; George Green, Hyatt Pickett, and Stanley Sawmelle, all of Washington.

Later last evening the couple left for New York, where they will sail for a cruise to Cuba, Costa Rica, and the Panama Canal. They will make their future home at 6416 Thirty-first place, Barnaby Woods. When she left for her honeymoon, the bride wore a navy blue and white sheer frock with a navy turban and wine red and white accessories.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mr. and Mrs. Barnum C. McCusker, of East Orange, N. J., uncle and aunt of the bride.

Mrs. Dimmitt is a graduate of the Connecticut College for Women and her husband is an alumnus of Alabama Polytechnic Institute and received his master's degree in engineering from Purdue University.

French Citizens Here Invited to Bastille Day Fete

There will be a reception at the French embassy, 2221 Kalorama road, Friday for all French citizens residing in the District, Maryland and Virginia. The party will be from 7 to 10 p. m. and is in celebration of Bastille Day, France's national holiday.

The Ambassador, Count de Saint-Quentin, will leave tomorrow for New York to take part in Bastille Day festivities. In his absence the Counselor of Embassy, Jacques Trueille, will preside over the party at the embassy.

The Naval Attaché, Commander Pierre Benech, is in New York, where he went to meet the Fourth Cruiser Division of the French navy. The division consists of the flagship, Georges Leygues, the Gloire and the Montcalm. The commander, Rear Admiral Rene Emile Godfroy, was welcomed aboard by Count de Saint-Quentin in New York, and later the Admiral paid a courtesy call on Rear Admiral Andrew C. Pickens aboard the U. S. S. San Francisco.

Mrs. Turnage Gives Luncheon

Mrs. Edgar Boyd Kay and Mrs. Charles Demontet were honor guests for whom Mrs. Needham Turnage entertained at luncheon yesterday in the Louis Seize Room of the Shoreham. Both Mrs. Kay and Mrs. Demontet are planning to leave Washington soon to be gone for most of the summer.

In the company were Mrs. Howard P. Foley, Mrs. William F. Gude, Mrs. Edgar Boyd Kay, Mrs. Millard P. Stewart, Mrs. J. D. Blackstone, Mrs. Minnie Keyes, Mrs. Asa V. Burdine, Mrs. Tilman B. Parks, Mrs. Lillie R. Hunt, Mrs. Frank Morrison, Mrs. Benton Cramer, Mrs. Frank J. Murphy, Mrs. Lee P. Hodges and Mrs. Holland H. Crowell.

Also Mrs. W. Wintermute Sloan, Mrs. Robert S. Regar, Mrs. Lois Marshall Hiss, Mrs. Edward Campbell Shields, Mrs. Sidney Smith, Mrs. Paul B. Cromelin, Mrs. A. Gordon Clay, Mrs. William J. A Round of Parties Is Being Given For Margie Morton and Mr. Bear

THERE'S A SPURT of midsummer gaiety in the hunt country this week, with a round of parties being given in honor of Miss Margie Garrison Morton and Joseph Frank Bear, whose wedding will take place Saturday afternoon at 4:30 at Sullyfield Farm, the "Warrenton" home of her parents, Maj. and Mrs. De Forest Willard Morton.

Tonight Mr. and Mrs. John H. Buchanan, of Lenox Manor, Warrenton, will give a buffet supper in honor of the couple. Among the guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Peirce, Jr., she is the former Miss Mary Morton and will be matron of honor and only attendant for her sister at the wedding; Mr. and Mrs. Robert Duennner, Jr. Mr. and Mrs. David Batchelder, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Haserick, Mr. and Mrs. Baldwin D. Spilman, Mrs. Morton, Miss Jane Wilbur, Miss Betty Charrington, Miss Mary Selden Kennedy, Miss Rice Barrett, Mrs. J. J. Macy, Mr. and Mrs. William Standley Stokes, Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. William Nelson Wilbur, Miss Frances Glover and Randolph Charrington, Jr., whose engagement was announced last Saturday; Dr. Jack Sinclair, Robert Wallach, Jr., Hugh Spilman, James Peirce, Henry Frost, Jr., Mackenzie Tabb and Douglas Smith, of Alexandria.

AFTER THE rehearsal for the wedding on Friday afternoon, Maj. and Mrs. Morton will give a supper for members of the bridal party and out-of-town guests. Among those invited are Mrs. Audrey Cates, of Washington, and Miss Mary Ellen Bear, of Montgomery, Ala., sisters of Mr. Bear; his twin brother, Carl Bear, of Montgomery, who will be best man; Mrs. Lawrence Bear and Mrs. Frederick Bear, of that city; Miss Morton's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Sanderson, of Washington, and another aunt, Mrs. H. C. Mitchell, of Minneapolis.

THE MISSSES Jane, Betsy and Eleanor Rust and Peggy Wilmer have issued invitations to a subscription dance to be held at the auditorium in Leesburg Friday, July 28, from 10 until 2. Several dinner parties are being planned beforehand.

Col. and Mrs. Fitzhugh Lee Minnigerode have cards out for the marriage of their daughter, Patricia, to Arthur Mountfort Longfield Ponsonby, July 28, at 4:30 at East Down, Parkers Point Road, Sands Point, L. I. Miss Minnigerode is a niece of Powell Minnigerode and George Minnigerode, of Washington, and of Charles Minnigerode, of Baltimore. She and her sister have many friends in the hunt country and frequently visit Maj. and Mrs. Oliver Filley, Dr. and Mrs. Archibald Randolph, and other relatives.

MISS MARGARET MINNIGERODE, sister of the bride-to-be, paid an extensive visit to Countess Robert, of Washington, last spring. Both she and her sister now live in New York. They are nieces of the late Mrs. Marietta Minnigerode Andrews, of Washington, author of "Memoirs of a Poor Relation," "Scraps of Paper," "Through My Looking Glass," and other books.

'Summer Bachelors' Break Doldrums With Stag Parties

The prevalence of stag parties is a sure sign that summer has settled over Washington, and this week there has been quite a flurry of such functions. With most of the wives of members of local society out of town during the warm months, the husbands left behind show an inclination to foregather with other "summer bachelors" for entertaining purposes.

Another in the series of stag dinners which have been given here lately was that held last night by the Argentine Ambassador, Felipe A. Espil, in honor of Carlos M. Noel.

The latter is chairman of the Foreign Affairs Committee of the Argentine House of Representatives, and is spending several days in visiting the Capital. He is at the Mayflower during his sojourn in Washington. Today the Undersecretary of State, Sumner Welles, will give a luncheon at that hotel in honor of Dr. Noel.

Last evening the Minister of Finland, Hjalmar J. Procopio, gave a stag dinner in the charming garden of the legation on Truxton place. Everybody present agreed that it was the night perfect for an al fresco affair. Most of the guests at the party were members of the press. The Minister recently returned from a stay in New York.

Stag parties reached a climax over the week-end, with Gen. Goes Monteiro, of Brazil, and Gen. Rafael Trujillo, of the Dominican Republic, in town. Several were canceled owing to the death of Claude A. Swanson, Secretary of the Navy, but even then there was a sizable number of functions "for gentlemen only" in honor of the two visiting dignitaries.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Senator and Mrs. Warren R. Austin, of Vermont, have with them at the Mayflower Mrs. J. W. Buell, of Burlington, Vt., who accompanied Mrs. Austin back to Washington from a trip to that city.

Several Representatives whose families have left Washington have taken apartments at the Wardman Park until the adjournment of Congress. They are Representatives W. O. Burgin and J. Bayard Clark, of North Carolina, and Representative Fred Bradley, of Rogers City, Mich.

Mr. and Mrs. David Brewer Karrick, of Washington, are at Southmayd, Stockbridge, Mass. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Russell left yesterday for Danville, Vt., where they have taken a house for the remainder of the summer.

Judge and Mrs. D. H. Kincheloe, who are widely known in Washington, recently left their home in New York and went to Annapolis, where they will spend the remainder of the summer as guests of Lieut. and Mrs. James H. Davis.

Mr. and Mrs. Duncan Phillips and Mrs. Haywood Newbold are registered at the Plaza in New York City. At the same hotel are Mr. and Mrs. John B. Keleher, of Woodley Park Towers.

Miss Bette Doyle and Miss Christine Hermann left recently for a cruise to Nassau, Miami and Havana. Before returning to Washington they will be in New York for several days.

Maj. and Mrs. Jesse Miller have opened their home at Bluemont, Va., where they will be until September.

Mrs. Morris Simon and her daughter, Miss Ruth Simon, have left for Bermuda, where they will spend several weeks.

M. and Mme. Peter Plan Maine Trip

The retiring Swiss Minister and Mme. Peter will leave early in August for several weeks in Maine, returning to Washington in September.

M. and Mme. Peters had planned a trip abroad this summer, but the minister has been ill. He will retire from the diplomatic service the end of the year.

The Coyles to Entertain Before Concert Tonight

Mr. and Mrs. David Cushman Coyle will give a buffet supper tonight for some of their younger friends, and the company will go on later to attend the first Watergate Concert of the season.

The party will take place in the Coyle apartment at 1719 K street. Guests will include Miss Anne Moorhead, Miss Jo Blades, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest McCormack, Mr. and Mrs. John S. de Beers, Spencer Thompson and Ted Taylor.

Mrs. Merriam Leaves

Mrs. Wallace Merriam is en route to the West Coast for a stay of several weeks. She will visit Mrs. George Marye while in California.

Lynn P. Talleys Still on Go; to Make Home Here

RFC Executive to Lease or Sell Dallas, Tex., House

"Those traveling Talleys" might well be the title for Lynn P. Talley, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, and Mrs. Talley and their three daughters, the Misses Martha, Carolyn and Beatrice Talley, who have covered an amazing number of American miles the past two months and are still on the go.

Early in May, Mr. and Mrs. Talley and Miss Martha left for the South to visit friends in Palm Beach, Miami and St. Petersburg. Later, they went on to New Orleans to see relatives and friends and to have a look at Tulane University's medical school, where Miss Carolyn Talley, who was graduated from Vassar College in June, will be enrolled in the autumn.

Spend Some Time in Dallas Home

From New Orleans, the Talley trio went on to Houston and San Antonio, visiting friends and relatives in each city; and then on to Temple, Tex., where they were guests of Mrs. Talley's 83-year-old father, T. F. Down.

Dallas, Tex., where they still have a home, was the next stop on the Talley itinerary and there the three stayed for several days, being widely entertained by their many friends.

Starting back north early in June, they stopped off in St. Louis for a visit with Mrs. Charles Spence, the former Kathleen Talley, who is widely known in Washington and was married here. Her many friends will be glad to know that she recently was elected president of the Wellesley Club of St. Louis.

From Missouri, the Talleys went directly to Poughkeepsie, N. Y., for commencement exercises, where they enjoyed a reunion with both their graduating daughter and their younger daughter, Miss Beatrice Talley, who finished her sophomore year at Vassar. Both girls made their bows to Washington society during the Christmas holidays of the past season.

Further Plans Now on Tap

A trip to the New York World's Fair was the next item on the Talley schedule, and later, most members of the family came on to Washington for a brief stay in their apartment at 2540 Massachusetts avenue. Miss Martha Talley, however, soon departed for up-State New York, where she has a summer job at a music camp near Lake Placid.

But still the Talley traveling for the season is not finished, for in the next few days, Mr. Talley and Miss Carolyn will be off to Lake Placid to spend the remainder of the summer. Meanwhile, Mrs. Talley will leave again for Texas, where she will sell or lease her home there and move her furniture to a house she and her husband have taken in Weeley Heights. They will leave their apartment on Massachusetts avenue, Miss Beatrice Talley, who is now attending a house party in Dallas given by her Vassar roommate, Miss Nancy Morris, will return to Washington with her mother and spend the remainder of the summer here.

Italian Envoy Host to Admiral

The Italian Ambassador, Prince Colonna, entertained at dinner last night for Admiral Giuseppe Cantu, high commissioner of the Italian pavilion at the New York World's Fair. Admiral Cantu, Signora Cantu and their daughter, Miss Augusta Cantu, are stopping at the Mayflower.

Today at noon the admiral will call upon President Roosevelt at the White House.

Mrs. Dillon and Son To Visit Here Month

Mrs. James J. Dillon and her seven-month-old son, Martin Conboy, who arrived by plane from the West Coast last Sunday, will be guests of Mrs. Dillon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph S. Walsmith, for a month.

Mr. Dillon is an attorney with the Department of Justice and has offices in Los Angeles, where he and his wife make their home.

Federation to Defend Married Women's Jobs

Clubwomen Warned to Be Alert in Combatting Discriminatory Legislation; Noted Author Asks $5,500 Fund to Fight Proposed State Laws

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Warnings that women must be alert in combatting discriminatory legislation designed to restrict their progress are being sounded in both the business sessions and programs of the biennial convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs being held this week in Kansas City, Mo.

Miss Earlene White, of Washington, national president, presenting her report to the more than 1,000 delegates, told of the mobilization of the 71,000 federation members to war on bills introduced in State Legislatures last year which were inimical to married women workers.

Margaret Calkin Banning, noted author and cousin of Representative Francis Calkin, of New York, in a address before the convention last night, asserted "There is at present a definite stiffening resistance to the development of women along many of the lines which they have marked out for themselves."

"Bills restricting married women from working, introduced in 19 State Legislatures, were not only unfriendly to women but, in some cases vicious," she said.

'Working Wives' Problem Foremost

Miss White told a special forum meeting the "working wives' problem" was the organization's most important business new.

She recommended the federation set aside $5,500 to establish at the New York headquarters the machinery for carrying out the 1930-1940 program to save the rights of married women. Referring to introduction of bills in State Legislatures to bar married women from gainful employment in State and other jobs, she asserted:

"Not one of us really feel sure that the bills which came up in State legislatures and were reported as 'killed' in many States this spring, are really dead. Many of us expect they will raise their heads again when the legislatures meet in 1941."

"We all have need to be concerned over the bills to keep married women from public and private service, for these bills are but the entering wedge of an attack upon all women who work and hence upon democracy."

Mrs. Banning told her audience "woman's progress along the lines which have been laid out by the women who gained suffrage, who stood for feminine penetration into the world of business, is being attacked in three ways. The first attack is from outside, from men who begrudge women their earnings. The second is from those who fear that women's work is deleterious to their sexual functions. The third is even more shocking, coming from those capable women and girls who can work but who have lost the feeling that they have a social duty as well as a personal one."

Mrs. Banning, who spoke before the Congressional Club while on a visit here a little over a year ago, urged last night, as she did then, that women use all intelligent means to avoid and prevent war and to maintain a peaceful world, not only because of its cost in the lives of men but because "war works against women's true advance."

Cites Conditions in Dictator State

In Germany, she said, women were taken from responsible positions to be put into the kitchen, and now that they are needed in industry they have been put back, but at low-paid positions where there is no chance for advancement or progress.

In line with this statement was the report of Mrs. David Simms, of Nebraska, international relations committee chairman, who said that during the last year, federations of business and professional women's clubs have ceased to exist in Austria, Czechoslovakia and Hungary, and that the problem of refugees who are business and professional women is of vital concern to the National Federation.

Hundreds of Jewish, Catholic and Protestant women who have been engaged in business or professions in these three countries are coming here for a new start in life, she said, and suggested how women in this country could co-operate in assisting them.

Four "First Ladies" on Parade

Among the members of the Woman's Benefit Association in Washington who will participate in the "Parade of States" at the New York World's Fair today will be (left to right) Mrs. Viola Wall as Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt; Mrs. Stella Townner, as Martha Washington; Mrs. Edna Boardman, as Mrs. Rutherford Hayes, and Mrs. Rose Weissner, as Mrs. Herbert Hoover

Delegates Sail to A. A. U. W. Meet

Miss Anna Klingenhagen, who has been residing at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women, 1634 I street during the past season, while doing research at the Library of Congress, sailed last week for Europe to attend the convention of the International Federation of University Women which will meet in Stockholm, Sweden, August 6 to August 13.

Miss Angela Williams, who sailed last week also, will attend as a nonvoting delegate.

The Swedish officials have planned a full program, dealing with questions related to the federation and including opportunities to study phases of public life in Sweden. Miss Williams intends to make a special study of government housing and co-operatives, in which Sweden and other Scandinavian countries are considered to lead the world.

Before going to Sweden, Miss Williams will spend some time in Scotland, a week in London and then leave for the Midlands, where she will see as much drama as possible at Oxford, Stratford and Malvern and later visit the Welsh coast and the Lake Country. She will return September 19, on the Calsonia.

Miss Mary Louise Chase, another member of the local branch of the A. A. U. W., who is now abroad, will also attend the international convention.

Mrs. Frank A. Linzel Wins New Honor With Election to National Church Council

A NEW HONOR came to Mrs. Frank A. Linzel, president of the Woman's Council of the Washington Federation of Churches with her election as a director of the National Council of Church Women at its convention in Lake Geneva, Wis., last week.

Mrs. Linzel is a past president of the Woman's Club of Chevy Chase, was president of its building company, which was in existence during the erection of its new clubhouse completed last October; and is president of the Motion Picture Council as well as the local council of church women.

The National Council of Church Women is the co-ordinating agency of local and State councils, with headquarters in Chicago. More than 200 women, representing 18 denominations and 23 States, attended the annual convention. Miss Mary Smith, of Minneapolis, was elected president.

MRS. CARL H. GIROUX has been appointed State president of the District of Columbia Society, Children of the American Revolution, to succeed Mrs. James Henry Harper, who served for ten years and was elected a national vice president in April. Mrs. Giroux organized and served as first president of the Potomac Society, C. A. R., in 1935. She is a former national vice president, a former manager of the C. A. R. Magazine and before coming to the District, served as president of a local society and as a State officer of the organization in New York. Although she has no children of her own, she has been active in promoting the work of the Daughters of the American Revolution of which she is, of course, also a member.

THE SPANISH SPEAKING CLUB will meet tonight at 1408 L street, from 5 to 7 o'clock. Its sessions are held every Monday and Wednesday between those hours, under the direction of Mario Barra.

Montgomery Heads Too Busy to Eat Out

The Montgomery County commissioners were too busy to go to lunch yesterday. An imposing stack of work had piled up during the previous holiday week. The county fathers were deep in approving a flock of minor bills when lunch time arrived.

They decided they would be burning midnight oil if they went out to lunch with the attendant button-holding by job-seekers and other lobbyists so they instructed Clerk Richard H. Lansdale to send for food. The meeting ended shortly before 5 p. m.

Board May Buy U. S. Bonds With Idle Cash

Upper Marlboro, Md., July 11 (AP). Following refusal of Prince Georges County bankers to continue to pay the county interest on sinking fund accounts maintained by the county administration, the board today took under advisement a proposal to utilize the sinking funds for the purchase of Government bonds.

Ogle Marbury, counsel for the county commissioners, reported there is approximately $125,000 impounded in various banks in the county against the redemption of school and road bonds that could be used for the purchase of bonds.

Mrs. Reynolds Visits Catholic Council Here

President Discusses Convention Plans At Headquarters

Mrs. Earl R. Reynolds, of Chicago, national president of the National Council of Catholic Women, is spending several days at national headquarters here, discussing details of the nineteenth annual convention, which will be held in San Francisco September 9-14.

In addition to delegates from local groups affiliated with the council, who will attend the convention, members of the headquarters staff will go and several speakers will be from Washington.

The Right Rev. Msgr. Michael J. Reedy, general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, heads the speakers. Others will be Eugene Butler, legislative director of the conference, Miss Linna Brestette, of the social action department, and John Bowen, of the National Council of Catholic Men. Thomas Woollock, editor of the Wall Street Review, also will be on the program.

Those from the headquarters staff who expect to attend include, Miss Agnes G. Regan, executive secretary; Miss Margaret Lynch, assistant executive secretary; Miss Linna Wilson, field representative of the National Catholic Welfare Council; Miss Anna Rose Kimpel, of the National Catholic South Council, and the Rev. Lucian Laerman, of the National School of Social Service, which is a project of the council.

Mrs. Wilson Will Speak

The Woman's Party tonight will celebrate the ninety-first anniversary of the first Woman's Rights Convention, held in Seneca Falls, N. Y., in 1848. The observance will be a meeting in the garden of Alva Belmont House, the Mrs. Wilson is a graduate of the University of Oregon, holds an M. A. degree in psychology from Columbia University, and is also a graduate of the Chicago School of Social Work. She has been a psychologist in the Portland public schools since 1926. She is a member of Alpha Phi fraternity and the American Association of University Women. At present, she is head of the Department of Extension and Federation Service of the Portland Federation of Women's Clubs, national headquarters on Capitol Hill, with Mrs. Dorothy Sanford Wilson, of Portland, Ore., as guest speaker.

Mrs. Wilson, who is president of the League of Professional Women, will discuss "Modern Issues Affecting Women." Others on the program will be Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, former national chairman of the party, who will tell the story of the Seneca Falls convention; Mrs. Hazel Nyman, who will read the "Declaration of Sentiments" approved by the 1848 convention, and Miss Grace McGerr, who will read the resolutions adopted there. These two documents form the Declaration of Independence of the feminist movement. Miss Helen McGerr will preside.

The League of Professional Women is a comparatively new organization, having been formed seven years ago by a group of married business and professional women in Portland to protect the married woman's right to work. It has been successful in Oregon in preventing discriminatory legislation against married women, and now is organizing in other States.

Montgomery Oaks To Be Rejuvenated

Historic oaks on the lawn of the Montgomery County Courthouse at Rockville that watched George Washington pass with Braddock's ill-fate expedition and witnessed Confederate troops' destruction of Rockville town records in 1864, are to be rejuvenated.

County Commissioner John Oxley, custodian of the courthouse, yesterday obtained permission of the county commissioners to engage a tree specialist to look over the trees, saw off dead limbs and cement portions that have succumbed to age.

To Attend Dickinson

Miss Anne R. Horn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert F. E. Horn, who attended National Park Seminary the past year, has enrolled as a student at Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., for the academic year beginning in September.

CITY OF THE BLIND?

MANY Washingtonians, so the story goes, know little or nothing about the amazing things so near them that attract visitors from all over the world.

The Capital, the Monument, the Lincoln Memorial, the White House, sure, everyone but the blind has seen them—from the outside at any rate.

But what of the others; statues, buildings, treasures of art, marvels of science, strange and wonderful inventions, precious documents, great books; milestones along man's upward march from savagery?

Have you seen them, old timer or newcomer?

If there is a problem in transportation that has kept you from visiting this world at your doorstep, Capital Transit with its city-wide, convenient service will solve it for you.

Let us send you our latest guide map—free for the asking. In it are listed points of interest, car and bus lines and route numbers clearly shown. By consulting it you will be able to find your way about town with the greatest ease.

Travel by Transit costs very little, too. A dime if you buy one ride at a time; 8/10c if you purchase tokens. But if you plan a solid week of exploration we suggest you invest $1.25 in a weekly pass. Then you can ride as often as you please from Sunday to Sunday.

Montgomery County Zone Board Named

MONTGOMERY COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST.
2713 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md.
Telephone SE 3-4200.

Appointment of the County Board of Zoning Appeals was announced yesterday by the Montgomery County Commissioners. The members of the board are Dr. Benjamin C. Perry, of Bethesda; Emory H. Bogley, of Friendship Heights; and John K. Williams, of Takoma Park.

Each member will receive a salary of $800 a year. The chairman, elected by the board, will receive an additional $100.

Dr. Perry, prominent physician of Bethesda, formerly was president of the Montgomery County Board of Commissioners. Bogley formerly was a member of the Washington Suburban Sanitary Commission. Williams is a chicken and egg producer.

Assessor Appointed

The board of commissioners appointed Lawrence R. Smoot, of Kensington to be a member of the general reassessment assessing force at a salary of $1,800 per year, and Harold L. Bradford to be a permanent assessor at a salary of $1,500 a year. It awarded a contract for purchase of seven motorcycles to H. Addison Bowie, of 621 H street northwest, who was low bidder with the price of $314 each after allowance for turn-ins. The motorcycles will be used by the county police traffic squad.

Board Prefers Action

The Montgomery County board of education yesterday failed to reach any decision in two important matters. It failed to elect a permanent chairman and postponed action on the controversial use of Welsh Field in the rear of Richard Montgomery High School for night softball.

The board received a petition from residents adjacent to the field complaining about the bright lights and the noise and asking that the board rescind its permission for use of the field. Judge John H. Gassaway, of the county juvenile court, was spokesman for a group of softball enthusiasts who appeared to urge continuance of night games. Paul Wire, president of the Rockville Softball League, said the bright lights would be shielded.

Plans for Field

Others in the delegation included William V. Bouie, attorney and vice president of the league; Joseph Henderson, secretary-treasurer; Crescent Bridge, athletic director of Montgomery Blair High School; Silver Spring, Benjamin N. Jack; A. L. Nutt, president of the Rockville Rotary Club; and the Rev. John J. Coady, pastor of St. Mary's Catholic church. The group pointed out that public-spirited citizens had expended $1,500 to install the lights and prepare the field for night games.

Chairman Pro-tem Julius B. Stadler appointed Jack T. Irwin and J. Upson Leamon as pro-tem chairman and secretary, respectively, and authorized in a bond issue of $175,000, enacted by the last session of the Legislature. Mrs. Martha Bright was appointed a trustee of Laytonville Colored School in place of the late Samuel Bright.

Return Aid Funds

Rockville. — The Montgomery County Welfare Board returned unexpended funds amounting to $6,250 to the Montgomery County commissioners. Mrs. Dorothy M. Kurtz, executive secretary, reported at the meeting of the board. Resignation of Mrs. Frank Zundel as a member of the board because she moved from the county, was accepted "with deep regret."

Mrs. Kurtz reported that Louis Merriam is making a study of the welfare setup. The county welfare board is sharing with the Social Service League work of compiling histories on jail inmates whose behavior has indicated mental abnormality. For the present only persons definitely indicated as committable to a State institution will be referred to the welfare board and other cases to the Social Service League. In the month of June, 1938, 167 families of 485 children received aid to dependent children and 17 persons aid to needy blind. A total of $15,721.05 was expended by the board.

Holt Tells Lions Americans Fail To Value Rights

"One is not being a sissy by being patriotic," Senator Holt (Democrat) of West Virginia, told a gathering of the Silver Spring Lion's Club last night, holding a dinner and dance at the Manor Club in Norbeck, Md., to celebrate the installation of officers.

Holt, speaking on "Americanism," declared, "we in America do not realize the value of the rights given us by the Government." He contended the Nation was being challenged from within and without and denied that communism represented no menace. Although the Communists are few in number, he said, their importance lies in the strategic positions they hold and the use they make of them.

Other speakers were Steadman Prescott, judge of the circuit court at Rockville, Md., and Beryl English.

New officers installed were E. Merritt Douglas, taking the place of retiring President James W. Gill; Capt. William P. Smith, first vice president; Harry Trainer, third vice president; Orville Hinson, secretary; Randolph, treasurer; John Diamond, Hon. Tanager; Herbert Hendricks, tall and thin; Dr. Kenneth Smith and Joseph Smith, directors.

Tick, Tock, Will Go the Clocks, As the Gambler's Tale Is Told

Alexandria Oldsters Tell How the Law Made the Stranger Pay

This is the story of the ticking of a clock, of a gambler who was made to sweat for his earnings and of a recent appropriation by the Alexandria City Council that will help seekers after the time of day.

Old timers tell the story now when they gather, in the cool of evenings, under the "gambler's steeple" of the Alexandria City Hall. They start off by recalling how, the other night, the council appropriated $556 to repair the clocks. The clocks are in the gambler's steeple and have been there since 1873—and that touches off the story of how the gambler came to town.

This was back in the early part of the last century. The "old market house" then held the city offices, the Masonic Temple and the clock. It was a wooden and brick structure but it had no steeple or clock. The gambler lit in, taking everyone to the cleaners. There is a connection between him and the clock, for the fleeced ones were sore.

They wanted to get back their losses. So someone thought up a handy statute, an old one (as handy statutes generally are) whereby a gambler could be arrested as a vagrant and his services for a certain period sold out to the highest bidder. The law seized the gambler, twisting its mustaches the while, allowing him to "bid himself in" for the estimated amount of his winnings.

Then they wondered what to do with the money. They decided to build a steeple on the "market house." There, they say, in the cool of the evening, is how the steeple got its name. In 1871 the "Market House" was burned. The legendary steeple crashing.

Plans for the new City Hall did not provide for a steeple but the late John B. Daingerfield, a wealthy citizen of the time, donated $10,000 for steeple and clock. The new steeple took the old one's name.

D. C. Chest May Reject County Plea

Committee Advises Refusal of Arlington Welfare Board's Membership Request

ARLINGTON COUNTY
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Clarendon, Va. Tel. OX 0779.

The executive committee of the Washington Community Chest has recommended that the Chest reject the Arlington County Welfare Board's application for membership for 1940, it was announced last night by J. J. Moody, county superintendent of public welfare.

The adverse recommendation was made, according to a letter from Herbert L. Willett, Jr., Chest secretary, "because the committee did not feel that it could make an exception to one of the fundamentals on which the chest is based, that all organizations participating as members must be incorporated and operating under a private board and completely disassociated with a public agency."

The letter indicated, however, that a change in the setup operating the county social program might bring about a favorable recommendation on application for Chest funds.

During 1939 and 1939 the Arlington County Board of Welfare has been affiliated with the Chest through the Conference of Suburban Social Welfare Agencies. Willett explained that county agencies were regularly the Chest members. For 1940, however, it was decided to have all units of the conference apply for membership in the Chest individually.

Willett said, the Board of Welfare for the first time came under direct jurisdiction of the Chest and its regulations.

Commenting on the recommendation to the Chest's trustees, George A. Collier, chairman of the Welfare Board, said: "Such a decision will deprive the Welfare Board of the necessary Chest funds to continue a number of vital and necessary activities. . . . These activities include medical care for indigent hot lunches and dental care for needy school children; camp for underprivileged children; family service program.

The visiting Nurses, Boy and Girl Scouts, and Health Clinics have been accepted as Chest members.

Full G. O. P. Ticket

Arlington.—Plans were under way yesterday by the Republicans to place a full ticket in the field for all county offices, the State Senate and Delegate to the General Assembly, according to an announcement made by Lawrence Michael, chairman of the County Republican Executive Committee.

Selection of candidates for the several offices will be made at the county convention to be held at the Ashton Heights Woman's Clubhouse August 8.

Precinct mass meetings will be held August 4 to select delegates to the convention. Each precinct will be allowed one delegate and alternate for every 25 votes cast at the last general election.

The Whites are well known in Washington and Montgomery County. Mrs. White was a Lamond whose ancestors settled in the area now occupied by the Capital in 1773. Mr. White is descended from early Maryland settlers. He is employed by the General Accounting Office.

Montgomery 4-H Clubs To Display Products

A dress revue, which will include an exhibition of dresses, coats and suits made at dress shops recently conducted in the county by Miss Edythe M. Turner and Mrs. Harry S. Beall, and exhibits of quick bread, yeast bread and cakes made by about 100 girls, will feature the annual achievement day of the 4-H Clubs of Montgomery County in Rockville tomorrow.

The program also will include talks by Miss Jessie Hinton, home management specialist of the University of Maryland Extension Service, and Mrs. Orville Scoville, president of the Montgomery County Council of Homemakers' Clubs, and two-minute reports by the presidents of the 16 girls' 4-H Clubs of the county.

Last Rites Today for Alexandrian

Mrs. Lieberman's Funeral to Be In Agudas Achim; Died in Brooklyn

The Washington Post Bureau.
207 Prince St., Alexandria, Va.
Phone Temple 3767.

Services will be held today for Mrs. Bartha Lieberman, 66, of 410 King street, Alexandria, who died Monday in Brooklyn, N. Y., after leaving Alexandria the day before for a health resort.

Mrs. Lieberman, the daughter of Rabbi Isaac Bandas and Sheema Rosenhaus Bandas, was descended on her father's side from 11 generations of famous Russian rabbis. Rabbis also figured prominently in her mother's family history.

Funeral services will be at 10:30 a. m. in Agudas Achim Synagogue, with burial to follow in the Congregation Cemetery.

Mrs. Lieberman had left for the Catskill Mountains, and was stuck in the Brooklyn home of her sister, Mrs. Esther Weiser. Also surviving are her husband, Felix Lieberman; a daughter, Mrs. Fanny Blackman, of Rocky Mount, N. C.; two brothers, Bernard Bandas, of New York, and Morris Bandas, of Alexandria; and two grandchildren.

Outing Aides Named

The board of directors of the Alexandria Chamber of Commerce yesterday announced committees to handle details for the annual outing dinner July 27 at Fort Belvoir. The dinner will be followed by a dance in the recreation hall of the Army post.

$100,000 Fish Laboratory to College Park

The University of Maryland, College Park, has been selected as the site for a $100,000 laboratory building of the Bureau of Fisheries, it was announced yesterday.

The building will serve as the bureau's principal research headquarters for the Atlantic region. Construction is expected to get under way within four months.

Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, said arrangements had been made for graduate students to obtain research fellowships and assist in experimental work.

Improvements in the methods of canning, smoking and freezing of fishery products will be studied at the laboratory.

3 Beer Dealers Cited for Hearing

Rules to show cause why their licenses should not be revoked were issued against three Montgomery County beer distributors yesterday by the Montgomery County Liquor Control Board. The dealers are Eugene J. C. Bailey, John R. Frey and Richard H. Dietle.

The rules allege the distributors violated county liquor board rules by selling beer without stamps being affixed showing the county handling charges had been paid, and that they violated the law establishing the liquor control board as the sole agent for distribution of beer. A hearing date was set for July 24 in Silver Spring.

Brothers Ordained at Same Rites

Ordained at the same services were two brothers living near Martinsburg, W. Va. The young ministers are Conrad and Herbert Strobbridge (left and right in white trousers). Others in the group are: Front, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Strobbridge, parents; center, the Rev. Albert Quenzel, pastor of the Vanville Church of Christ where the ordination was held; and (top, left to right) the Rev. Hiram Voorhis, of Hyndman, Pa., who founded the Vanville Church and who preached the ordination sermon, and the Rev. Ernest Worden, Martinsburg pastor who assisted in the services.

V.P.A. to Hear Sir Willmott at State Session

Press Group to Open Convention July 21 In Hot Springs

By the Associated Press.
Hot Springs, Va., July 11.—Sir Willmott Harsant Lewis, Washington correspondent for the London Times since 1920, will be the principal speaker at the Virginia Press Association's convention banquet here Saturday night, July 22. Maj. Raymond B. Bottom, of Newport News, V. P. A. president, announced today.

The fifty-first annual convention of the V. P. A. will open at the Homestead on Friday morning, July 21.

C. H. Morrisett, State tax commissioner, will address the Saturday morning session of the convention and will discuss legal advertising required to be published by county officials.

Virginia Associated Press newspapers will hold their meeting here on the same dates as the Virginia Press Association, the programs being so arranged that there is no conflict in sessions. Maryland and District of Columbia members of the Associated Press will be the principal speakers. The AP members will hold business conferences Saturday morning.

Miss Eicher Leaves Place In Prince Georges

Miss Lydia E. Eicher, executive secretary of the Prince Georges County Welfare Board, left yesterday for Santa Fe, to become assistant director of the New Mexico Department of Public Welfare.

She will be succeeded by George Chesbro, executive secretary of the Associated Press, who is now in the Prince Georges County in October, 1935, from Westchester County, New York, where she served as case supervisor of the Emergency Relief Administration. Following the World War, she was a social worker with Red Cross in Czechoslovakia. Between 1926 and 1933, she was field representative with the State Department of Child Welfare in New Mexico.

Irvin L. Main has been elected chairman of the Prince Georges Welfare Board, and George Cooke, vice chairman. Mrs. C. O. Appleman and Prof. Geary Eppley, both of College Park, have been named new members. The vacancy caused by the resignation of Boykin Watson is yet to be filled.

Firemen Pour To Parley at Ocean City

2,000 to Attend Maryland Group's Biggest Convention, Opening Today

By the Associated Press

Ocean City, Md., July 11.—The vanguard of 2,000 firemen moved on this resort city tonight for the opening, tomorrow, of the forty-seventh annual convention of the Maryland State Firemen's Association, billed by its backers as the biggest in history.

More than 200 companies from Maryland, Delaware and Virginia have been invited, and some are sending as many as 20 delegates to the three-day program of business and fun sessions.

A feature of the convention will be a fireworks demonstration on the pier Friday night. Most elaborate of any fireworks display ever assembled at Ocean City, the outlay will include more than $500 worth of Roman candles and fuses.

The convention will officially open with a business session in the Pier ballroom, which will be headquarters for all meetings. Mayor Edmond H. Johnson will welcome the firemen at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

Americans Win All-Star Game, 3-1; Feller Is Hero

62,892 See Young Star Check Rally

Shelches Nationals In 6th to Save Game; Joe DiMaggio Slaps Game's Only Homer

Box Score on Page 21.

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

New York, July 11.—The oft-repeated story of American League supremacy was re-enacted this afternoon deep within vast Yankee Stadium, fringed with 62,892 fans come to gaze at the stars of the baseball firmament. The seventh annual All-Star game was another National League flop.

By the score of 3 to 1 the American Leaguers, looking suspiciously like the New York Yankees, whipped their rival major league with two sudden outbursts of Yankee power that jolted the National League out of a 1-0 lead.

Each time an American League run crossed the plate, it was one of the six Yankees in the lineup who provided the power. George Selkirk inserted the big blow of a two-run fourth inning, and in the fifth alone came Joe DiMaggio with one of his copyrighted home runs into the leftfield bleachers.

Yanks Blast Lee

Shutout for three innings by big Paul Derringer, of the Reds, the American Leaguers vented their spleen against the Cubs' Bill Lee, the National League's second pitching choice. The hapless Lee yielded all three of the winning runs.

Red Ruffing, Tommy Bridges and Bob Feller were a mighty trio on the mound for the American Leaguers, with Feller the pitching hero of the day. To the rescue of the faltering Bridges young Feller went in the sixth inning with the bases full and only one out, choked off that rally with the aid of a double play, and then allowed only one hit in a triumphant 3-2-3-inning finish.

DiMaggio Hits Home Run

The 62,892 paid $75,701 at the gate, the bulk of which goes to a fund for aged and indigent ball players. See ALL-STAR, Page 21, Column 1.

Browns Beat Cards To Complete Rout Of National League

St. Louis, July 11.—The lowly St. Louis Browns made it an American League day all the way around by shelling the Cardinals, 14 to 4, in a special exhibition game here this afternoon to decide the city championship.

Johnny Kramer went the route for the last place club, while his teammates were pounding Paul Dean, Bob Bowman and Clyde Shoun for 16 hits. Joe Glenn led the Browns' attack with two doubles, a home run and a single.

St. Louis (A.L.)... 116 540 306-14

St. Louis (N.L.)... 100 610 110-4

Kramer and Glenn, Spindel; Paul Dean, Bowman, Shoun and Owen Bremer.

Setting the Stage for the Only National League Score

While Joe Gordon, second baseman for the American Leaguers, waits for the throw from the outfield, Arky Vaughn slides safely into second on Stan Hack's single in the third inning of yesterday's All-Star game. Vaughn later scored the National League's solitary run as it bowed, 3 to 1.

Challdon Is Favorite At Suffolk

Will Go to Post at 2-1 In $50,000 Handicap This Afternoon

Boston, Mass., July 11.—A field of 16 Eastern thoroughbreds and a lone Far Western invader meet at Suffolk Downs tomorrow in a wide-open scramble for the $50,000-added purse of the Fifth Massachusetts Handicap, richest race of the New England season.

Although tonight the skies were clear and cool and the track was lightning fast, W. L. Brann's Maryland-bred Challdon, winner of the early favorite at 2-1 to lead home the largest field in the race's history over the mile and a furlong route. Back of Challdon, conqueror of Johnstown in the Preakness and winner of the Yankee Handicap here a week ago, came three other low-priced horses, but from there on down the prices were high and the chances slim.

Second choice was Ligatoli, the South American shipped in from California by Crooner Bing Crosby, and Lin Howard, at 5-1. Mrs. A. J. Abel's Honey Cloud, winner of the Sussex Handicap in track-record time at Delaware Park, was quoted at the same odds, while the price on J. H. Louchheim's Pompon, runner-up to War Admiral for 3-year-old honors in 1937, came third at 6-1.

There were two surprises when the entries were called. King Ranch named its stretch-running filly, Ciencia, winner of the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby, and Belair Stud sent along the slip for its Fighting Fox, a crack sprinter with little liking for distance.

Challdon, to be ridden by Harry Richards under the weight of 113 pounds, will be coupled with a stablemate, Athelwold, in the mutuels. Lucky Omen, at 100, and Neddy, 114, will go as the Kilmer-Pairfield entry. Mrs. Emil Denemark sent in two of her large string, Blind Eagle, 108, and War Minstrel, 111. Ciencia, one of the lightweights at 106, will be coupled with Mrs. Parker Corning's Thanksgiving at 118.

Utter Futility

The Nationals Came Out Swinging and Went Down the Same Way; Feller Resembles Fellow Facing Feller; Terry Acts Like a Totem Pole

By Henry McElmore.

Yankee Stadium, New York, July 11.—The American League proved its superiority over the National League here again today. The surprise was just as terrific as if some one had announced that Christmas comes needs a hair-cut.

The National Leaguers came out swinging. They kept on swinging and swinging without doing much damage to the pitches tossed up by the Messrs. Ruffing, Bridges and Feller.

The National Leaguers now have lost five of the seven all-star games. When Ford Frick, president of the National League, will enter their important series against the second-place Giants at the Polo Grounds Thursday without the services of their ace outfielder, Ival Goodman, who was injured in today's All-Star game.

Goodman dislocated a shoulder when he dived for George Selkirk's liner in the fourth inning, the hit that drove across the first run for the American Leaguers. He was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital where, after a preliminary examination, it was announced he would be unable to play for ten days or two weeks.

It is a good thing that Feller is a fine pitcher, because he is the essence of futility at the plate. He swings exactly as if he thought he were hitting against his own stuff and knew it wasn't any use to try to get a hit.

Ducky-Wucky Medwick believes the criminal code should be changed so it would punish a citizen who did to another citizen what Joe Gordon did to the St. Louis outfielder in the eighth inning. Medwick hit a line drive toward rightfield and Gordon, using all of the principles devised by the Wright brothers in building the first plane, took off from the ground, banked sharply, and hauled down the ball. It was the fielding gem of the game and one of the best.

See McELMORE, Page 17, Column 7.

Injured Shoulder Puts Ival Goodman On Shelf 10 Days

Yankee Stadium, New York, July 11 (P).—The leading Cincinnati Reds of the National League will enter their important series against the second-place Giants at the Polo Grounds Thursday without the services of their ace outfielder, Ival Goodman, who was injured in today's All-Star game.

Goodman dislocated a shoulder when he dived for George Selkirk's liner in the fourth inning, the hit that drove across the first run for the American Leaguers. He was taken to St. Elizabeth's Hospital where, after a preliminary examination, it was announced he would be unable to play for ten days or two weeks.

Cornell Lands 3 More On All-Star Squad

Pittsburgh, July 11 (P).—Three more Cornell players today were added to the All-Star team which Dr. John Bein Sutherland will send against the New York Giants, National Football League champions, at the Polo Grounds, New York, September 7.

The trio are Alfred Van Ranst, A. Sidney Roth and William McKeever, all standouts on the powerful Big Red eleven that won the "Ivy League" mythical title last fall. Brud Holland, Cornell's All-America end, previously was named to the squad.

Otto Greiner Wins Junior Golf Crown

Scores a 140 in Mid-Atlantic Event at Kenwood; Shoots In Perfect Figures

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Otto Greiner, Baltimore's 1938 tournament sensation who won four titles in a row, including the Maryland State and Mid-Atlantic Amateur crowns, returned to the winner's circle for the second time this year yesterday at Kenwood as he matched par figures with 140 over the 36-hole route to win the Mid-Atlantic Junior championship.

The Rodgers Forge youngster, who will be 20 years old on Sunday, had a five-stroke margin over the District Junior champion of two weeks, Jimmy Stevens, of Army and Navy, who had 145 for the twin rounds. Greiner was 72 in the morning and 2 under par with a 68 in the afternoon, while Stevens shared the first round lead with Johnny Farrell at 71 and then slipped to 74. Farrell went sky-high with 85.

David (Scotty) Ross, Capital, playing in a pajama coat instead of a shirt, to protect his sun-burned arms, was third with 75, 73-148, and won the trophy in the 17-year and under class. Earle Skinner, Columbia's D. C. Junior and school-boy medalist, trailed Ross by a stroke with 75, 76-149. Skinner had two under par for 14 holes of the first round but slipped five over par on the next four for a 73. He took six on the par 3 seventeenth in the afternoon to lose his chance to best Ross for the 17-year trophy.

No cards in the afternoon were prominent for several of the favored players, including Ralph Bogart, George Vass and Bob Brown. The tournament favorite Buddy Sharkey was unable to play. Greiner, runner-up in this tournament last year to Bobby Brownell, and winner of the Maryland Inter-collegiate title in his 1939 competitive play, had 14 pars the two times he played the outgoing nine. He was over on the second and eighth, from three putts, and birdied the seventh and third.

He missed par on three holes of the back nine in the morning but made up for one stroke with a birdie on the thirteenth, with a 6-foot-8. After passing Stevens at the twenty-seventh hole, he burned

Dames! Dames! Dodger Fan Wants $1.10 for Damage

New York, July 11 (P).—Ladies' day at the ball park left a Brooklyn fan soured and disgruntled today and demanding $1.10 he paid for his ticket in a suit against the Brooklyn Dodgers baseball club.

"Dames! Dames! Dames!" nothing but dames," said Julius S. Trieb, explaining his court action. "They trampled me. They stepped on my suit and tore my pants. They pushed my face down. I never saw so many women in all my life."

Trieb, a lawyer, said his experience had chilled him on ladies at ball games. There were 15,000 women there last Friday.

"They ought to stay home," Trieb said, firmly.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

The All-Star Game by the Clock:

New York, July 11.—

2:00 p. m.—Somebody was wrong when they said this game would start at 2 o'clock. They're still marking off the field.

2:06—Batter up! and it's Stan Hack, of the Cubs, who last fall had hoped he wouldn't see Charley Ruffing again until the 1940 world series.

2:09—The folks who said Hack wouldn't get a foul off Ruffing are wrong. He just hit one.

2:10—Hack wishes he had fouled that last pitch. It was the third strike, and he went away, like the Sixth Avenue EL.

2:13—Paul Derringer is winding up for his first pitch of the game and—

2:13.02—Roger Cramer hits Derringer's first pitch for a single to left and the impression is that it's going to be a long afternoon.

2:16—The impression is that Derringer is going to do all right. He just retired Rolfe, DiMaggio and Dickey on easy fly balls.

2:20—Ernie Lombardi singles to left for the first National League hit off Ruffing and the controlled Italian press will probably make much of it.

2:22—Ducky Medwick takes a third strike, but not in silence. He is telling Umpire Cal Hubbard something, and it is not a bedtime story.

2:25—Hank Greenberg lifts a high pop over the infield.

2:27—Greenberg's pop-up finally comes down and Arky Vaughn catches the ball and a fine case of sunburn.

2:28—Joe Cronin singles to right and what's going on here, anyway? The only two hits of the American Leaguers have been made by the Red Sox.

2:32—There's trouble brewing for Ruffing. Vaughn just led off the third inning with a single past Cronin.

2:33—There'll be more trouble for Ruffing if that Texas Leaguer by Stan Hack drops safe in leftfield, and it looks mighty like it will.

2:35—It's a single for Hack and there are men on first and second with one out.

2:34—Hank Greenberg is flat on his face, Vaughn is crossing the plate, Hack is galloping to third, and the hero of the moment is little Lonnie Frey, who has just belted a double past Greenberg into right.

2:36—Strike one on McCormick.

2:36.20—Strike two on McCormick.

2:36.50—Unless they have changed the rules about three strikes, McCormick is out.

2:38—So is Lombardi, on a pop-up to Gordon, and the National Leaguers get only one run off Ruffing, which is quite a feat at that.

2:40—Apparently anything can happen in an All-Star game, because McCarthy is sending in a pinch-hitter for Ruffing, who has been the No. 1 pinch-hitter for no less than the Yankees.

2:41—The pinch-hitter is Myril Hoag, and how does it feel, Myril, to come all the way from St. Louis just to look at a third strike? You oughta know, seein' as how you just took one.

2:44—It's Tommy Bridges now pitching for the Americans, if that's any comfort to the National Leaguers, which it shouldn't be.

2:40—Bill Lee gets the pitching job for the Nationals. The first two men he faces are Yankees, and it is remembered that another chap named Lee had no success against Yankees.

2:55—Lee's apparently in for it. Dickey just walked with one out and Greenberg followed with a single to left.

2:57—Nice going, Lee. It seems that Joe Cronin just struck out. He lost his grip on his bat, it sailed toward shortstop and Arky Vaughn was tempted to field it and start a double play.

2:58—The score is tied at 1-1. George Selkirk just singled into right field and Lee now knows the Yankees haven't changed much.

2:59—It's 2-1 now in favor of the Americans. Vaughn just booted Gordon's grounder, and we ain't kidding. He kicked it into short center field with his shoe.

Three o'clock (E. D. T.), courtesy Western Union.

3:01—Bridges just registered a strikeout, but one that doesn't please him. He struck out himself on three pitched balls.

3:04—Billy Herman bats for Goodman. Billy Herman and 62,892 others look at a third strike.

3:06—Now is the chance of the National League. A shift in umpires just moved a National League arbiter behind the plate.

3:13—Well, Ah do believe Joe DiMaggio has gone and done it. Yeh, it's a home run into the left field seats and if the Americans aren't leading now by 3-1, Ah'll sue mah arithmetic teacher.

3:13.30—Bill Lee is scratching his head, if it means anything to ya.

3:14—Oooh, Bridges is on a spot. Lombardi singled and Joe Cronin just made a mess of Medwick's double-play grounder and the tying runs are on base.

3:17—They're still on base, but only because Joe Gordon just made a whale of a play on Ott's hard smash and held it to an infield single.

3:18—There are two out in the inning. McCormick, who grounded out at the start, and Bridges, who was just waved out by Manager Joe McCarthy.

3:19—It's Bob Feller now pitching for the Americans and—

3:19.30—And when Feller needs a friend, Joe Gordon is the guy. Gordon just scooped up Vaughn's hard grounder and started it on a double-play course.

3:30—Blimp Phelps, the Nationals' third pinch-hitter, puts in an appearance, and what an appearance. Five thousand fans sitting behind the plate have their view of center field blocked.

3:44—Medwick lined a single to right field with two out in the eighth and—

3:44.02—And it isn't a single at all. It ain't nothing, because Joe Gordon just speared it with a one-handed catch they'll remember until memory of man runneth not to the contrary, or something like that.

3:49—That terrific noise you may be hearing is Joe Gordon getting a large hand as he goes to the plate in the eighth.

3:54—Johnny Mize is sent in to pinch hit with Ott on base and one out in the ninth.

3:57—Two out in the ninth. Mize and 62,892 others just got a look at a third strike.

4:00—So did Stan Hack, and everybody seems to be leaving the park for some reason, perhaps because the game has ended.

To Slide or Not to Slide Is Big Question Facing National League's Lonnie Frey

Lonnie Frey, whose double in the third inning scored Arky Vaughn with the National's only run in the All-Star game, is shown thundering into second.

Expecting the play to be close, Frey prepares to slide. Joe Gordon, American League second-sacker, is off the bag but ready to dive at Frey's feet.

There was no need for the slide so Frey rights himself gracefully to reach the base standing up. These three shots all occurred in less than three seconds.

Shute Paces P. G. A. Into Third Round as Other Stars Fail

2 Committee Members Bow To His Golf

Twin Match Round Sees Many Stars Fall by Wayside Guldahl Is Beaten

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 11.—Denny Shute, helped by 51 fellow pros to a victory over the executive committee that got him into the tournament, went out single-handed today to knock off two members of the tournament committee of the Professional Golfers Association and lead the way into the third round of the National P. G. A. championship.

Qualified for match play only through the unprecedented action of President George Jacobus, Shute first defeated Ted Luther, of Pittsburgh, 1 up, and followed that up with a 3-and-1 victory over Leo Diegel, of Philmont, Pa. The 40-year-old two-time former champion had been one of the men most instrumental in getting Denny into the field.

While seven winners of the P. G. A., U. S. and British Open titles were shunted to the sidelines in the two rounds of 18-hole matches at the Pomona Country Club that cut the field from 64 to 16 survivors, Shute walked into what may turn into a grudge fight tomorrow.

Kocis Bails at Shute

His next opponent will be Emerick Kocis, the Orion (Mich.) long hitter who shared medalist honors with three others in the 36-hole qualifying round. Kocis was one of the nonsingers of the Shute petition, and agreed to play Denny only after he had had a talk with Walter Hagen. "The Hag" persuaded him that, since Shute had come this far without player protest, it would be silly to take a solo stand now.

Hagen was only one of the many stars who found today's task too much for them. The colorful old gent gave all he had, but lost to Tony Manero, 1936 Open champion, by 1 up in the morning round, the same stage which saw Gene Sarazen, Jug McSpaden, Jimmy Thompson, Harry Cooper, Sam Parks and Will Groggin wind up on the outside looking in.

In the afternoon's matches, as defending champion Paul Runyan, came through again, the carnage continued. Bates, Open champion in 1937 and 1938, but afraid of these sudden-death episodes, found his worst fears confirmed when he bowed to 30-year-old Clarence Desser, of Andover, Mass., 2 up. Ray Manser, the Oakmont (Pa.) "human No. 1" iron who toured the course in 66 yesterday, ran into a 3 and 2 shelling at the hands of Horton Smith.

Revoluta Beats Manero

Manero went only one step beyond his defeat of Hagen for he was put out by lantern-jawed Johnny Revoluta, 1935 P. G. A. winner, 3 and 2, and Ky Lafoon, who tied with Kocis, Ben Hogan and Dutch Harrison for the medal, bowed to Tom O'Connor to the tune of 2 up.

Sarazen, Hagen and Diegel among them have won 10 of the past 21 P. G. A. tournaments. Thomson and McSpaden have been runners-up. Sarazen, Hagen, Manero, Parks, Johnny Farrell, beaten 3 and 2 by Harrison, and Guldahl held the Open title.

Yet the field of 16 that goes into the 36-hole match stage tomorrow morning is enough to satisfy the sharpest critic. The only real survivors are Rod Munday, Runyan's assistant, who won by 2 up over Jack Ryan, veteran Louis See P. G. A., Page 21, Column 2.

Jeanne Cline, 15, Medalist, Beaten

Chicago, July 11 (AP).—Fifteen-year-old Jeanne Cline, of Bloomington, Ill., went the way of almost all golf medalists today.

Low scorer in the qualifying round of the women's Western Open, Miss Cline was eliminated in the first round today by Georgia Tainter, Fargo, N. Dak., girl, by a 2 and 1 margin.

Miss Cline, giant-killer and semi-finalist in the recent Western Open, trailed by two holes at the turn, but managed to even the match on the fourteenth hole. Miss Tainter, winner of 16 trophies in her two years of golf, however, took the sixteenth with a birdie and the seventeenth with a par 5 after they had halved the fifteenth.

U. S. Athletes Given Tea by Ambassador

London, July 11 (AP).—United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy, assisted by his wife, three daughters and two sons, entertained today at an embassy reception and tea dance for American athletes in England.

Among his guests were members of the Harvard and Yale track and tennis teams and American participants in the recent All-England tennis championships at Wimbledon, British Open champion at Wimbledon, St. Andrews and the Henley Regatta.

Here They Come—And There They Go at Hagerstown

Above, in second position is Groucheur, winner of yesterday's third race on the opening card at Hagerstown, moving up fast on the leading Walli, who lost the scantiest kind of a photo-finish. And below, they're bustling into the backstretch turn in the fourth. Wise Sister (rail) is running neck-and-neck with Sky Hostess and ultimately beat her out by two lengths in the 6½-furlong dash.

Ace Pilots Prepare for Yacht Regatta

North East River Event Scheduled For Saturday, Sunday

By the Associated Press.

North East, Md., July 11.—Ace speedboat pilots of the East were listed today for the North East River Yacht Club's tenth annual regatta, which is expected to attract 5,000 to this bay town this week-end.

Sailboat skippers will send snipes and comes into action Saturday and wind up the day with a free-for-all race which may see a score or more sailing craft skidding over the course.

Sunday's events will include championship outboard races and nine classes of inboard runabouts.

K. R. Dorries, for three years holder of the championship in sailing races with the type E sloop, and Louis Burke, of Philadelphia, will be officials in charge of the regatta.

Among the out-of-Staters already entered are Fred Jacoby, of North Bergen, N. J.; Les Buckman, Baldwin, L. I.; Ward Frauenthal, Free Port, L. I.; Arthur J. Gatehouse, Richmond Hill, N. Y.; Westernman W. Jones, Wilmington, Del.; George Ward, Wilmington, and Frederick Hahn, holder of the championship for 135-cubic-inch hydroplanes.

'Sheriff' Krause, Already in West, Signs With 'Skins'

Traveling expenses for one football player to training camp were saved yesterday by the Washington Redskins when Max "Bananas" Krause, veteran professional full-back, sent his signed contract for 1939 to the Ninth street office.

Krause, a native of Spokane, Wash., where the local pro club will do the signing, is limbering up, starting August 6. In the off season he is a deputy sheriff.

Krause's most successful year of the three he has spent with the Redskins was 1938, when he played in only three games but proved the star of each. He started off with three touchdowns and a total of 200 yards gained against the Eagles.

In the first engagement with the Giants, however, he severely damaged his knee and was forced to sit out the rest of the season.

According to Redskins headquarters, Krause has completely recovered and will be a welcome addition to the backfield roster. He will be playing his eighth year of professional ball, having come to the Redskins in a trade after five years of service with the New York Giants. His college experience was gained at Gonzaga University.

Scores 140 to Win Event at Kenwood; Turns in Par Card

Hagerstown, Md., July 11.—The sound of pounding hoofbeats echoed through the staid old business section of this sector today as Hagerstown's "Cinderella race track" came into its own and announced to one and all that its time to go out to the fair had come.

Although there's not so much as a merry-go-round or ferris wheel in sight, the natives speak of the newly opened 10-day racing season as "the fair" and refer to the subject of the subject of the $20,000, expended bringing out the local track when other diversions are mentioned.

This subject, however, is one which can match the success story of any self-made Congressman, for the Hagerstown track of last year did not readily admit remembering the situation in 1938.

"Oh, this place was in a hell of a mess," explained George W. Hammaker, a director of the Hagerstown Fair Association, using the picturesque descriptive terms characteristic of this locality.

"We spent about $20,000, once we got started, we found that almost all of the grandstand posts were beginning to rot away and we just had to do something. We built from the ground up and the clubhouse entirely new," Hammaker beamed.

The tenacious civic pride of the Hagerstown folk in their track located on the edge of the business area is not hard to grasp, for it is a community owned affair. Hagerstown raised and Hagerstown owned, you might say.

In fact, the Hagerstown population predominates in almost every respect. It appears that it is not unknown to bear a bit of neighborly gossip along these lines:

"Mrs. Moriarity, did you notice that darling ensemble the cute little fellow on the track yesterday?" John Law all for it.

The local constabulary, is developments, is one of the foremost advocates of the "sport of kings." In fact, Golden Key, winner of today's second half of the daily double, is the property of Sheriff Joe Baker's daughter, Mrs. Grace Hutchins.

But about this track—it is something of a corner grocery store situation at the mutual windows. Any number of times today the cashiers at certain windows gave out of money and had to refer winning bettors to another window.

Hagerstown's 'Fair' Is One To Remember

It's Just One Big Happy Family When Race Meet Starts

Barney Walsh Eliminated At Baltimore

Sutter Also Beaten In Maryland State Tennis Tournament

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, July 11.—Two successful raids were carried out by the field against the seeded list in the Maryland State Open tennis tournament today at the Baltimore Country Club. The victims were Ernie Sutter, of New Orleans, seeded fourth, and Barney Walsh, of Rockville, champion in 1937, seeded eleventh.

Sutter's downfall was the more unexpected of the two, for few fans in the well-filled stands ever had heard of Darrell Hudlow, Phoenix, Ariz., before his appearance on the court.

Hudlow won by 6-4, 6-8, 6-4. Walsh fell speedy victim to Doug Imhoff, of California, in straight sets, 6-4, 6-2, in a match which had been the final one in 1937. Since that time Imhoff has come along well, while the former State champion was not at his best. Imhoff, captain of the University of California team, has a lot of pace on his service and Walsh could not meet his controlled speed.

Imhoff's victory eliminated the second-ranked player from the Middle Atlantic section and advanced him to the fourth round, along with Wayne Sabin, of Portland, Ore.; Isadore Bellis, of Philadelphia, and Ronald Lubin and Larry Dee, fellow-Californians.

Gilbert Hunt, defending champion from Washington, and other seeded players reached the third round. Hunt battled hard to eliminate Tate Coulthard, of California, 8-6, 6-3. Hunt will meet Warren Christner, of Texas, tomorrow morning.

Tenth-seeded Henry P. Russo, of Washington, also advanced to the third round. He defeated Charles Pearson, Baltimore, 6-2, 6-3, in the second round after winning by default from Eric Jacobsen, Baltimore. In another second-round encounter, Dan Roberts, of California, triumphed over Ralph Adair, Washington, 6-3, 6-3.

Schlosser Cup At Manor Won By Mrs. Taylor

Turns in Low Net 157 For Victory; Second To Mrs. McPherson

The Schlosser Cup tournament feature of women's golf play at Manor Country Club, came to an end yesterday after 36 holes with Mrs. Max Taylor taking the prize trophy with a low net score of 157. An aggregate of 193, from which was subtracted a handicap of 36 strokes, gave Mrs. Taylor first place.

Her score was five shots better than that of the runner-up, Mrs. D. M. McPherson, who had a total of 210 and a 48-stroke handicap.

Mrs. J. W. Cramer and Mrs. Harvey Cooper tied for the third low net with 163. Mrs. Cramer winning the draw. Gross prize for both days went to Mrs. L. G. Pray, who turned in 98 for her first round and yesterday topped one stroke off that for a total of 171. Another prize, for the least number of putts, went to Mrs. J. R. Daily with 32-33-165.

The guest day tournament, run into Schlosser Cup competition, went to Mrs. Porlinski with 81. Mrs. George Goodman won a draw at 86 from Mrs. Harry Porter for the second place. Mrs. R. E. Jones had 43 for the low gross in the inside nine tournament, and Mrs. John Meyer and Mrs. R. Pittman tied for the net with 33.

Wise Sister Caters In Hagerstown Race Feature at Hagerstown

7-Year-Old Mare Brings $11.40 Ticket

Sky Hostess Takes Second Money; 5,000 Attending Opening of 10-Day Fair Meet

By Walter Haight.

Hagerstown, Md., July 11.—Horse racing returned to Maryland's half-mile circuits for its summer season today and 5,000 customers reported for the action under the auspices of the Hagerstown Fair Association. With perfect turf conditions prevailing, the sport was featured by a smashing victory of Wise Sister, owned by J. B. Belk, of Charlottesville, Va. The 7-year-old mare, a daughter of Wise Counselor, found the winner's circle after two years of trying to get into the money. In 18 previous starts she had not been as good as third, but today was her day.

Wise Sister forged to the front early and stayed there under the handling of jockey Leon Garrett, who took the mount just before the race when jockey Beverly Hager became ill. She stepped the 6 1/2 furlongs in 1:21 1/4 and paid a substantial $11.40 ticket. In an oddity of the mutuels, she paid $6.70 to place and $2.20 to show.

Sky Hostess, the mare which came over from Wheeling to upset a field at Delaware Park last month, was the only horse to come close to Wise Sister today. She pressed the pacemaker in the early stages but was outrun when Garrett put Wise Sister to a drive. Pansy's First showed a good effort to be third, losing the place money via a photo-finish.

J. B. Belk started the meeting right when he saddled Snobbish Lady in the first race. Jockey Garrett also did the riding on this occasion, sending the Sir Walter filly home with something to spare over Molasses Julia and Nanci's Best. Those who backed Snobbish Lady along with Golden Key in the second race collected an $80.60 pay-off.

Golden Key, the 3-year-old colt, was the only horse to come close to Wise Sister in the daily double. Sammy Palumbo did the riding on Golden Key and outlasted Schley Buck and Beaufast.

Hagerstown's 'Fair' Is One To Remember

The business, explains that it really should be called the "Agricultural and Mechanical Association of Washington County, instead of the Fair Association."

"Listen, there are 500 shares in this track, 418 of which are owned by the citizens and farmers living around here," he said. "What profit it is shown here goes back into building a bigger fair for the county and improving our stands."

A Picturesque Spot

The track—a half-mile oval—has a hairpin turn at the southeast sector and comes out by traveling over a bridge—they prefer to call it an overpass here. However, the curves are well banked and the track has been worked into firm, fast condition.

As the pack comes around a hazy, blue background, the Maryland mountains it is as picturesque a spot as you can expect to find around these parts.

A large majority of the 5,000 or so who turned out to start off the eleventh annual year of racing were local citizens.

The Hagerstown businessmen who conduct the 10-day local track, one of the few tracks in this country that is a community project, are headed by A. K. Coffman, president, whose yearly salary is $10,000.

Other officers are Better, vice president; Chas. W. Wolf, secretary; and L. A. Brown, treasurer.

"It's one of the big happy families at the Hagerstown 'Fair'."

Bill Bennings At The Post

Hagerstown, Md., July 11, 1939.

Regulars in today's crowd hardly recognized the place. Instead of the rickety stand that occupied the space just beyond the finish line, there is a homey clubhouse, a structure of two floors with boxes outside and a dining room above. In addition, the grandstand has been rebuilt with green and white decorations and gray seats. The refreshment stands have been moved, along with the telegraph office, to the end of the stands. The box seats, which once obstructed the view of some of the grandstand customers, have been removed. The press box has been moved upstairs along with the judges and stewards who have previously held sway in the infield. Even the loud speaker sounded better. Harold Bester, who superintended the job of revamping the place, explained that work has been going on without a break since April 1. At noon today, the new building was being carried into the clubhouse and the wire for the photo finish was being strung.

"Look," said Bester, pointing to a man carrying a table, "now you know how hard we have been working. Why, if the meeting had started yesterday, we wouldn't have been ready. Jockey Beverly Hager was taken ill during the program and canceled his mounts for the remainder of the day. Chester Walters is riding the first race. The little Crisfield, Md., boy turned in some nice siddie jobs at Charles Town and horsemen are predicting a fine future. He is a likable little fellow with a big smile and a knack of rating horses. Jockey Buddy Root changed his plans and decided to ride here. He had said that he would ride in Ohio while this season was in progress. J. F. Cook, leading trainer at Charles Town, and a Washington boy, will be busy tomorrow. He has horses in the second, third, fifth and sixth races.

First race—The entry of Dark Pony and Deblin seems to have an excellent chance of accounting for the main money in this field. Both ends showed speed at Charles Town, and I see no reason for mistakes. Mary's Lassie has a good speed figure and is dangerous. Chilly Breeze galloped greenly in that lone outing and could be close.

Second race—Alice O. flashed speed on several occasions at the other town. Shifts to an improved order for this and may be the right one at good price. Sun Tempus was a winner in the other State and is dangerous despite top weight. Hurdy Gurdy has been better in other years, but likes this track.

Third race—Princess Lady has plenty of foot and appears nicely placed in this test for fillies and mares. I'm going to string along Veritas came out at Charles Town and did everything asked. Filis well in this company. Clymene will be a factor, despite the 117-pound assignment.

Fourth race—Kitty's Rival breaks off the rail for this sprint and will be a keen factor if not the winner. Sun Belle gets off the reserve list and will save a couple of running mates. Small Change likes this course and will be close. Fair Deal would have to be respected if in action.

Fifth race—Chief Evergreen raced once at the other track and showed plenty of speed. Seems better suited by the shorter route in this. Cheshire showed to advantage in sprints recently and may surprise by going this route. Asterisks gets in with a partner and could be a keen factor.

Sixth race—Astonish had in-and-out form at Charles Town. Likes this route, and with good handling, will take the chief portion of the purse. Bay was in rare form in recent efforts and is a threat. Kesard will be closing fast in the stretch run.

Seventh race—Lucky Turn failed to race up to his name at Charles Town, having poor racing luck in this. With a fair sailing here, it looks like a set of brackets. Bloop turned in a powerful winning effort last out. Venetian may be better suited to this track.

Best bet—Princess Lady.

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Jody heard it come closer from the northeast as plainly as though it came on vast webbed feet, brushing the tree-tops in its passing. It seemed to leap the cornfield in one gust. It struck the yard trees with a hissing, and the mulberries bent their boughs to the ground, and the chinaberry creaked in its brittle-ness. It passed over him with a rustle like the wings of many geese, high-flying. The pines whistled. The rain followed.

The wind had been high overhead. The rain was a solid wall, from sky to earth. Jody struck it flat, as though he had dived against it from a great height. It hurled him back and threw him off his balance. A second wind seemed now to reach long muscular fingers through the wall of rain and scoop up everything in its path. It reached down his shirt and into his mouth and eyes and ears and tried to rattle him. He dared not drop the eggs in his skirt. He kept one arm cupped under them and put the other over his face and scuttled into the yard.

Chapter XXXVI

THE FAWN WAS WAITING, quivering. Its tail hung wet and flat and its ears drooped. It ran to him and tried to find shelter behind him. He ran around the house and to the back door. The fawn bounded close behind him. The kitchen door was latched. The wind and rain blew so hard against it that he could not swing it open. He beat on the thick pine. For a moment he thought he was unheard in the tumult and that he and the fawn would be left outside to drown, like biddies. Then Penny lifted the latch from the inside and pushed the door open into the storm. Jody and the fawn darted inside. Jody stood gasping. He wiped the water from his eyes. The fawn blinked.

Penny said, "Who was it, now, wishing for such a thing?"

Jody said, "Did I get my wish this quick allus, I'd mighty keetful."

Ma Baxter said, "Go change them wet clothes right away now. Couldn't you of shut up that fawn before you come in?"

"There wasn't no time, Ma. He was wet and skeet."

"Well—Long as he don't do no mischief. Now don't put on your god breeches. You got a pair there, full o' holes as a cast-net, but they'll hold together in the house."

Penny said after him, "Don't he look like a wet yearlin' crane. All he needs is tall feathers. My, ain't he grown since spring."

She said, "I think he'll be right nice-lookin', do them freckles fade and that hair ever lay flat and them bones git covered with meat."

"A few more changes," he agreed, innocently, "and he'll turn out handsome as the Baxters, thank the Lord."

She looked at him belligerently. "And maybe handsome as the Alverses," he added.

"That makes more sense. You better change your tune."

"I got no idee o' startin' a ruckus, sweetheart, and you and me penned up together by no storm."

SHE CHUCKLED WITH HIM, Jody, overhearing from his bedroom, could not tell whether they were making fun of him, or whether there was indeed hope for his appearance.

He said to Flag, "You think I'm purty, anyways, don't you?"

Flag butted him. He took it for assurance, and they ambled back to the kitchen.

Penny said, "Well hit's a three-day nor'easter. A might early, but I've seed change o' season this early, many a year."

"How kin you tell it be three days, Pa?"

"I'd not sign no papers on it, but generally the first September storm be a three-day nor'easter. I reckon, one way or 'other, the world, I've heered Oliver Hutton tell o' September storm as far off as China."

Ma Baxter asked, "Why ain't he come to see us this time? Grandma shocks my modesty, but I do like Oliver."

"I reckon maybe he's had enough o' the Forresters for a while, and jest ain't travelin' this road."

"They'll not fight without he acts quarrelsome, will they? The fiddle cain't play without the bow."

"I'm feared the Forresters, leastwise Lem. I'll romp on him any time they come up with him. Until they get the gal business settled."

"Sick doin's! Nobody acted, that-way when I were a gal."

"No," Penny said, "I was the only one wanted you."

She lifted the broom in pretended threat.

"But, Sugar," he said, "the rest jest wasn't smart as me."

There was a lull in the fierce beating wind. A pitiful whine sounded at the door. Penny went to it. Rip had found adequate shelter, but old Julia stood drenched and shivering. Or perhaps she had found shelter, too, but longed for a comfort that was more than dryness. Penny let her in.

Ma Baxter said, "Now let in Trilix and old Caesar, and you'll have things about to suit you."

Penny said to Julia, "Jealous of little ol' Flag, eh? Now you've been a Baxter longer'n Flag. You jest come dry yourself."

SHE WAGGED HER SLOW TAIL and licked his hand. Jody was warmed by his father's inclusion of the fawn in the family. Flag Baxter—

Ma Baxter said, "How you men kin take on over a dumb creetur, I cain't see. Callin' a dog by your own name—And that fawn, sleepin' right in the bed with Jody?"

Jody said, "He don't seem like a creetur to me, Ma. He seems jest like another boy."

"Well it's your bed. Long as he don't bring fleas or lice or ticks or nothin' into it."

He was indignant.

"Look at him, Ma. Lookit that sleeky coat. Smell him, Ma."

"I don't want to smell him."

"But he smells sweet."

"Jest like a rose, I s'pose. Well, to my notion, we fur's wet fur."

"Now I like the smell o' wet fur," Penny said. "I mind me one time, on a long hunt, I had me no one and the weather turned cold. It was over about Salt Springs, at the head o' the run. My, it was cold. And we shot a bear, and I dressed out the skin nice, and I slept under it, with the fur side out. And in the night come a cold, drizzly rain, and I poked my nose out from under, and I smelt that wet fur. Now the other fellers, Noey Gright and Bert Harper and Milt Bevells, they said I purely stunk, but I puttene my head back under the bearskin and I was warm as a squirrel in a holler tree, and that wet bear-side smelt better to me than yellow jessamine."

The rain drummed on the roof. The wind whistled under the eaves. Old Julia stretched out on the floor near the fawn. The storm was as cozy as Jody had hoped for. He made up his mind privately that he would wish for another in a week or two. Now then Penny peered out of the window into the dark.

It's a toad-strangler of a rain," he said.

Supper was generous. There were cowpeas and smoked venison pie and biscuit pudding. Anything that was remotely an occasion stirred Ma Baxter to extra cooking, as though her imagination could speak only by the use of flour and shortening. She fed Flag a bit of pudding with her own fingers. Jody, with a secret gratitude, helped her wash and wipe the supper dishes. Penny went to bed shortly after, for his strength did not hold out, but not to sleep. A candle burned in the bedroom and Ma Baxter brought her piecing, and Jody lay across the foot of the bed. The rain hissed against the window.

He said, "Pa, tell me a tale."

Penny said, "I've told you all the tales I know."

"No, you ain't. You allus got another."

"Well, the only one comes to me I ain't told, ain't rightly a tale. I ever tell you about the dog I had when I first come to the island? The dog could cold-out study?"

JODY WRIGGLED CLOSER up the counterpane.

"Well, sir, the dog was part fox-hound and part blood-hound and part jest dog. He had long sorrowful ears, night about dragged the ground, and he was so boy-legged he couldn't walk to sweet pasture bed. He had distant kind o' eyes, lookin' off some-ers, and them distracted eyes near about caused me to trade him off. Well, I hunted him a while, and it begun to come to me, he didn't act like no other dog I'd ever seed. He'd leave a cat-trail or a fox-trail right in the middle, and go lay down. The first time-two he done it, I figured I jest didn't have no dog a-tall."

"Well sir, it begun to come to me, he knowed what he was doin'. Jody boy, go fetch me my pipe."

The interruption was exasperating. Jody tingled. He scrambled for the pipe and tobacco.

"All right now, son. You set on the floor or on a chair and keep offen the bed. Any time I say 'trail' or 'track' you jiggle the bed to where I think the slats is busted. That's better—"

Doughton Sees Delay in Taxing Public Bonds

Expects Issue to Be Sidetracked Until Next Year; Hearings Ended

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, of the House Ways and Means Committee, expressed belief yesterday that legislation recommended by the Treasury to prohibit future issuance of tax-exempt securities would be sidetracked until next session, thus eliminating another adjournment barrier.

The committee concluded public hearings on the proposal after receiving testimony from John W. Hanes, Undersecretary of the Treasury, that the exemptions interfered with the flow of investment capital into private enterprise and undermined the effectiveness of "our progressive tax system."

Announcing the committee would meet behind closed doors today to determine whether to press for action at this session, Doughton told newsmen he thought the question was too involved and the time before adjournment too short to get a bill through.

Sees Action Next Year

"It may be made part of a general tax revision measure to be drafted for the next session," he added.

Hanes appeared before the committee for the second time in two weeks to answer opposition testimony, chiefly from representatives of State and local governments.

They contended elimination of tax-exempt securities would greatly increase the cost of their financing and place the States "at the mercy of the Federal Government."

Hanes said the Treasury estimated the maximum increase in cost to State and local governments would be $105,000,000 and would be spread over a period of 50 years so that absorption into the budget should not be difficult.

Scolds at LaGuardia

Hanes recalled that Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York had described some of Hanes' earlier testimony as "wild and cock-eyed."

"The mayor is fighting the multiplication table," the Treasury official said. "Unfortunately his faulty arithmetic has placed him in the uncomfortable position of acting as the champion of an entrenched special interest which is profiting from an injustice to the great mass of citizens."

Doughton remarked he had been astounded by the defiant threat of LaGuardia to "tax every bit of real estate the Federal Government owns in New York City" if the city's bonds were taxed.

"Do you think that threat is sufficient to warrant the Congress from abandoning the proposal?" Doughton asked Hanes.

"In my humble opinion, the answer is 'No,'" Hanes replied, adding he believed LaGuardia would have "a good deal of trouble making good on that threat."

By burning 25% slower than the average of the 15 other of the largest-selling brands tested—slower than any of them—CAMELS give smokers the equivalent of

5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK

YES, Camels, with their matchless blend of finer, more expensive tobaccos, mean luxury smoking and a lot more of it in every pack. Recent impartial laboratory comparisons of 16 of the largest-selling brands show:

1 CAMELS WERE FOUND TO CONTAIN MORE TOBACCO BY WEIGHT than the average for the 15 other of the largest-selling brands.

2 CAMELS BURNED SLOWER THAN ANY OTHER BRAND TESTED—25% SLOWER THAN THE AVERAGE TIME OF THE 15 OTHER OF THE LARGEST-SELLING BRANDS! By burning 25% slower, on the average, Camels give smokers the equivalent of 5 EXTRA SMOKES PER PACK!

3 In the same tests, CAMELS HELD THEIR ASH FAR LONGER than the average time for all the other brands.

Try Camels. Enjoy the cooler, milder smoking of long-burning Camels... America's No. 1 cigarette for Pleasure and Economy.
